

LARGEST H-HAUL

A 31-year-old Saanich man was remanded in custody in provincial court today, charged in connection with Victoria's largest heroin haul.

William Henry Pepper, of 2441 Foul Bay, was remanded without plea on a Sunday charge of possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

The man's arrest followed the seizure of 500 caps of the drug with an estimated street value of $10,000, Victoria drug squad said.

Pepper was picked up by drug undercover agents in the playground of St. Patrick's School at 10 p.m. Sunday. The man's arrest came at the conclusion of two weeks of investigation by the drug squad.

Mayors Want More

TORONTO (CP) — Mayors of most of Canada's largest cities united today in a demand for a bigger slice of federal-provincial revenues and for a greater say for municipalities in how the money is spent.

At the opening session of Cities for the '70s, there also was general agreement that the relative positions of all three levels of governments should be redefined to give the municipalities more authority in running their affairs.

However, there was disagreement over the future of the British North America Act.

One view was that it should be scrapped and replaced with a modern instrument, while others held that this would take years and that the municipalities' financial problems could not wait that long for infusions of fresh money.

Mayors Ivor Dent of Edmonton and Peter Pollen of Victoria considered adequate financial changes could be made under the present constitution.

"We must nurture the BNA Act, which has protected one of the finest cultures in the world, the French culture of Quebec," Pollen said. "And before we throw out the bath water, let's be sure the baby is out of the bath."

Pollen attacked the "faceless bureaucracy" of Ottawa and said spending from that level should be placed under discipline to make more money available at the lower government levels.

None of the mayors suggested that the cities should be given power to impose an income tax of their own, a concept that had been trumped on Sunday by premiers Robert Bourassa of Quebec and William Davis of Ontario when asked about it at a news conference here.

Mayor Rod Sykes of Calgary spelled out the revenue-sharing in detail by proposing that the federal and provincial governments hand over percentages of income tax, natural resources revenues, federal and provincial sales taxes collected in the cities, profits of provincially-owned public utilities and liquor board profits.

Mayor Vic Copps of Hamilton also criticized Ottawa spending and said the municipalities should go directly to the federal government and tell it:

"You must come to the rescue of the city if Canada is to go forward."

FIREMEN WATCH $2M BLAZE

KELOWNA (CP) — Firemen stood and watched a $2 million boat factory fire four miles south of here Sunday.

Fire authorities said the Canadian Fibreform Ltd. plant in the Westside Industrial Park is not in a fire protection district.

An RCMP spokesman said the Kelowna fire department would only answer a call outside its jurisdiction if a life were at stake.

Two fire engines from the nearby Lakeview fire brigade arrived at the scene but were not authorized to go into action.

Scott Barnes, vice-president of the Spokane, Wash., based company, said damage amounted to more than $2 million.

Destroyed in the blaze were about 130 fiberglass boats, ranging in length from 14 to 28 feet which were completed or were under construction at the plant.

The fire put 136 men out of work.

"We were the largest boat manufacturer in Canada until today," Barnes said.

He accused the fire departments of apathy.

A Kelowna fire department spokesman said the company was told when the plant was built in 1968 that it would have no fire protection.

Barnes said he did not know whether the company would rebuild. It would take a year to get into production if it did, he said.

Barnes said the company may decide to expand its Spokane plant instead.

He said about 100 of the workers held a one-day strike last week before agreeing to their first contract following certification with Local 2076 of the Carpenters and Joiners Union.

There were no injuries in the fire and RCMP said Monday the cause of the fire was unknown.

Guerrillas Renege

Times News Service
GUADALAJARA, Mexico — The kidnapers of U.S. Consul-General Terrence Leonard went back today on their promise to release him once 30 political prisoners were flown to Cuba and are reported to be making new demands, possibly involving a cash ransom.

There has been no word from them since Sunday when Leonard wrote that he was in "good health" and being treated well.

But as time passed with no release there were fears for his safety and government sources said still another factor might be involved — the kidnapers might be "too afraid" to release him immediately.

They pointed to a local news story in which police chief Jesus Ahumada Mercado was quoted as saying the

OFY Hires 36,152

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be jobs for 36,152 young people in 4,334 Opportunities for Youth projects, it was announced today.

The number is up from the 29,954 employed in some 3,200 projects sponsored by the government in the 1972 OFY program.

The budget for this summer's OFY program was earlier estimated at $39,970,000. In today's statement, the secretary of state's department, responsible for OFY, said grants totalling $35.6 million have been approved to date.

A spokesman said the remainder of the budget will go for administration costs. He said that only 1,300 approved projects could be announced now because of a delay in translation for the remainder.

The department said 32 per cent of OFY participants this summer will be university students, 27 per cent community college students, 31 per cent secondary or high-school students, and 10 per cent non-students.

With increased emphasis on participation in rural areas, the urban-to-rural ratio of projects now is 45 per cent urban to 55 per cent rural.

'STATESMAN OF CANADIAN MUSIC' DIES

The "Statesman of Canadian Music," Sir Ernest MacMillan died Sunday in a Toronto hospital. He was 79.

Conductor of the Toronto Symphony from 1931-56, it was under his baton the orchestra took its place among the major symphonic organizations of North America.

Sir Ernest was knighted by King George V, the first person outside the United Kingdom to be honored for his contribution to music. Obituary, Page 22.

SCARCITY SHUTS GAS STATIONS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government figures show that 342 gasoline stations — mostly in the midwest and southeast — have been forced to shut down due to the shortage of gasoline, according to Rep. Les Aspin (D-Wis.).

Aspin, who said he obtained the statistics from the Office of Emergency Preparedness, said the fuel crisis also threatens to drive out of business another 930 stations. He said the government figures represented "just the tip of the iceberg."

"By the middle of August, thousands of stations, mostly independent stations that sell cut-rate gas, will probably be closed and thousands more will be very short on supplies," Aspin said in a statement Sunday.

Aspin said the midwest and southeast sections of the nation have been particularly hard hit because they have a proportionately higher number of independent stations and refineries. He claimed 136 stations has closed in the midwest and 117 in the southeast.

Meanwhile, U.S. Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar downgraded today the threat of a country-wide gas shortage this summer.

The problem is "worrisome, but not serious," he said. "There will be limited local shortages," he added, but he said he saw no prospects of gas rationing.

In Tripoli, Libya, a nine-man team representing western oil companies assembled today for talks with the world's major oil producers on higher crude oil prices.

Nixon Thanked Me: Dean Quoted

Times News Services
WASHINGTON — Ousted White House counsel John Dean is prepared to testify that President Nixon personally congratulated him last September for covering up administration involvement in the Watergate incident, according to the two largest weekly newsmagazines in the U.S.

Time and Newsweek, in slightly different accounts, said Nixon's purported remarks came in a meeting among the president, Dean and another top White House aide.

The Florida White House, on Nixon's behalf, issued today a sweeping denial of any presidential involvement in the Watergate scandal or a subsequent cover-up in the wake of the news magazine stories.

In response to questions, deputy press secretary Gerald Warren, asked if the reference to "Watergate operations" extended to 1972 campaign espionage and sabotage, said: "It extends to all the matters that are now under discussion."

Newsweek quoted Dean as saying Nixon was in the Oval Office with Dean and White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman when the president said: "Good job, John. Bob told me what a great job you've been doing."

Time's version said Nixon, Dean and the president's domestic affairs adviser, John Ehrlichman, were present and that Nixon said: "John

City Soldier Under Fire In Vietnam

Times News Services
SAIGON — A Victoria man serving with the ICSS was the lone Canadian aboard a truce team helicopter which came under fire near the Cambodian border Sunday.

Capt. Charles Dillon, 29, of 925 Esquimalt, was one of nine people aboard the chopper when it was fired on, but not hit, by several bursts of small arms fire.

In another incident Sunday, a jeep carrying truce observers struck a land mine in the Central Highlands. Nobody was hurt in that incident either.

In Ottawa, an external affairs department spokesman termed the incidents "deplorable."

Sources said the fire broke out as the helicopter craft descended from 3,000 to 1,500 feet to avoid rain squalls five miles northwest of Vi Thanh.

Canadian sources said the chopper was not hit but was forced to turn back to Tri Ton, the origin of the flight 50 miles northwest of Saigon.

Canadian diplomats and newsmen reported Wednesday that two ICSS helicopters were fired on over Communist-held territory on a flight to Gio Linh along the demilitarized zone.

The Viet Cong later denied the reports and said the only firing that day was at an unmanned U.S. reconnaissance plane that appeared over Communist-claimed territory.

In other incidents Sunday, Saigon command spokesman Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien said Communist saboteurs wounded one person and damaged a locomotive and five boxcars in the mining of the newly reopened Saigon-to-Xuan Loc rail line. Trains resumed operation on the 50 mile stretch of track Friday.

Meanwhile, the first Mekong River convoy to reach Phnom Penh in two weeks arrived in the Cambodian capital today after losing a tanker to Communist fire.

Reports reached Phnom Penh that Cambodian insurgents overran a post 34 miles northwest of the capital last Friday, captured about 100 troops and slaughtered them.

MILLION-DOLLAR LOT SOLD IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — A corner lot at the downtown intersection of Georgia and Bute streets, measuring 132 feet by 132 feet, has been sold for $1 million, a 27 per cent increase since the last sale in December.

Identities of the buyer and seller were not disclosed by the real estate broker.

The property changed hands in December for $785,000, and before that in the early 1950s for $125,000.

Former NDP MLA Named Energy Boss

Five appointments to the new B.C. Energy Commission, which will ultimately have the power to regulate prices of petroleum and natural gas products in the province, were announced today by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

James Rhodes, 42, a Surrey businessman and former NDP MLA for Delta constituency from 1960 to 1963, has been named chairman.

Last year, Rhodes was president of the Cloverdale Board of Trade and he is a former chairman of the Surrey advisory planning commission.

Robert Smith, 51, a British-born chartered accountant now serving as financial adviser to the National Energy board, is the other full-time commissioner.

Smith, a former financial staff member of B.C.'s Public Utilities Commission for five years, to 1966, will be the manager of the energy commission.

Three part-time members of the commission appointed are:

Donald Johannessen, 36, a Victoria teacher since 1966 and former unsuccessful NDP candidate for Saanich and The Islands in the 1969 provincial election.

Johannessen, who lives at 505 Parker Avenue, gained a bachelor of arts degree in economics from the University of Victoria.

His research work for Uvic's social sciences research centre included a bibliography on the petroleum industry and an analysis of the Morrow Royal Commission on gasoline price structure in B.C.

John Caplette, 44, of Surrey, a farmland consultant, who has specialized in pollution and land reclamation problems. He is a member of the B.C. Institute of Agrologists and the Agricultural Institute of Canada and adviser to the

PULITZER PRIZE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Washington Post today won the 57th annual Pulitzer Prize for distinguished public service in journalism for its investigative reporting of the Watergate scandal.

In announcing the gold medal award, the trustees of Columbia University cited two Post reporters, Carl Bernstein, 29, and Robert Woodward, 30, for playing "so dominant a part in the inquiry and... development of much of the evidence that now is public property."

The Times has been carrying stories from these investigative reporters.

Pressure From White House Cited

Times News Service
NEW YORK — Marine corps commandant Gen. Robert Cushman, as deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency in 1971, authorized CIA assistance in the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, the New York Times reported today.

The Times, quoting sources close to the Watergate case, said the help consisted of "material and research" and was requested by John Ehrlichman, who resigned as President Nixon's domestic affairs adviser last week.

According to one source, Howard Hunt, a member of a White House team set up to determine who leaked the Pentagon Papers, had asked the CIA for help, but was told by an official that request from a higher authority was needed.

Hunt passed the request to his superior, Egil Krogh, who went to Ehrlichman.

The Times quotes its source as saying: "Ehrlichman makes a telephone call to Cushman, and says: 'Hey, these guys need some chores done. Won't you take care of it?' Cushman says, 'O.K., I'll do it.'" today White House aides Krogh and David Young told the CIA to construct for them a behavior profile of Ellsberg, even though Dr. Bernard Meloy, head of the CIA's psychiatric division, told his superiors such a task was an error in judgment.

The Washington Post said

Meloy was ordered by his own superiors to put the profile together and provide it to Krogh and Young.

"Meloy did not want to do it," one source insisted. "His orders to do it came from inside the CIA and outside CIA, namely the White House."

One source inside the executive branch voiced strong disbelief about Krogh's reported statement. He said Krogh was at too low a level in the White House to authorize CIA assistance.

Other sources told the Washington Post that Krogh, 33, who once worked in Ehrlichman's law firm in Seattle, had a reputation as "Mr. Clean" on the White House staff.

They maintained that he would never have acted in the burglary operation on his own.

Krogh's lawyer, William Treadwell, refused to discuss the case with newsmen.

the deputy campaign manager of Nixon's re-election organization; Gordon Liddy, another convicted Watergate participant, and four men besides Hunt who pleaded guilty to charges.

Meanwhile, former attorney general John Mitchell says the idea of Nixon resigning because of the Watergate scandal is "ridiculous."

He criticized United Press International for quoting his wife, Martha, as saying the president should quit.

Mrs. Mitchell called UPI White House correspondent Helen Thomas late Saturday night and said:

"Mr. President should resign immediately. I think he let the country down. It's going to take a hell of a lot to get him ... he's been compromised."

Asked why she thought Nixon should step down, Mrs. Mitchell replied: "I think in order to give credibility to the Republican party and credibility to the United States."

Mitchell, who has been mentioned frequently in allegations of an effort to cover up high-level administration involvement in the bugging of Democratic offices at the Watergate building, issued this statement Sunday:

Jumper Cuts Power

Student parachutist Barry Darnell got his wires crossed Saturday — his parachute got hung up in some Brentwood Bay power lines.

Darnell, of 3403 Bethune, was on his first jump with Victoria Skydivers after a week of ground training.

He jumped from 3,000 feet, missed the white cross flanking the dropping zone, and caught his chute in the power lines at West Saanich Road and Benevenuto.

Central Saanich police said two wires touched causing a power failure from 11:45 a.m. to 1:10 p.m. Darnell was unhurt.

Extension Discussed

Further progress was made today in a series of private talks between Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and Highways Minister Robert Strachan on the Blanshard Street extension.

Neither would go into detail of the discussion, but Curtis said "further review of the whole matter" will be given.

Another meeting was expected to take place, but no date has been set. There has been agreement on both sides to avoid public discussion of the subject until a settlement is reached.

Military Parade Marks Israel Anniversary

JERUSALEM (AP) — More than 400 planes roared across the land of the Bible today as Israel celebrated its 25th anniversary with prayers and a three-hour display of the mightiest array of military hardware ever seen at one time in the Middle East.

About 300,000 cheering spectators jammed the decorated streets of Arab and Jewish Jerusalem for the parade. But the birthday was more festive than warlike despite the biggest armed display in the Middle East since the 1967 war.

Troops and police guarded the parade route against guerrilla sabotage and reserve troops were mobilized for security. But there were no disruptions.

Prayers for peace were held in synagogues before 2,000 troops and more than 160 tanks and artillery guns moved past Premier Golda Meir, government and military leaders and David Ben-Gurion, the 86-year-old founding father of Israel.

Led by five jets and helicopters towing flags, the Israeli air force provided a roaring umbrella for the festivities.

The parade was the object of much criticism, at home as well as abroad. The United Nations asked that it be cancelled because part of its route lay through Arab East Jerusalem, recaptured from Jordan in the 1967 war, and that would anger the Arab nations.

Many Israelis contended that the $4.7 million being spent on the parade should be used for social welfare. Others felt it contributed to an undesirable warlike image.

The government rejected all objections.

Andrew Thompson, 48, professor of law at the University of B.C., who has taught courses in real property, petroleum and natural gas law and mining and forest law.

He is a member of several organizations including International Council on Environmental Law, and is the legal chairman of the Canadian Arctic Resources Committee.

Four sections of the controversial Energy Act passed during the recent session of the legislature would be proclaimed by cabinet order later today, Macdonald said.

Those dealing with establishment of the commission itself:

—Its powers;
—Responsibility of studying B.C.'s resource management policies including export of energy resources;

—And review and appeal procedures.

A key section of the act which is not being proclaimed now is the one giving the commission power to regulate prices of all petroleum and natural gas products at the wholesale and retail levels.

"We cannot establish the commission on Monday and make orders about prices on Tuesday," Macdonald said.

The price control section of the act would be proclaimed as soon as possible, but to do so now before the commission is properly set up and able to conduct sound research would be a "kangaroo proceeding."

Under the act, the commission will consist of up to seven members and Macdonald said consideration will be given later to the remaining appointments.

Salaries have not yet been established.

Macdonald said the government feels the five appointees announced today are "highly qualified" persons.

First priority of the commission will be to set up a "crash program" recommending measures to protect B.C.'s remaining resources of natural gas "so that the consumer gets the best possible price break and the province gets the best possible return on gas going south."

Rhodes said he will call the first commission meeting this Wednesday to lay down procedures for recruiting senior staff which could number around 30, including seven or eight senior engineers and accountants.

He estimated the commission's budget could run to about $600,000.

The commission's headquarters will be on the 21st floor of the Board of Trade Building in Vancouver.

Strike action today closed Hafer Machine Company Limited, 1720 Store.

No details of the dispute were disclosed by either side but company manager Edwin Townsend said the strike "caught us in the middle of orders."

Three Mills To Vote On Union

DUNCAN — Certification votes will be held at three mills Tuesday where the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada is challenging the International Woodworkers of America as bargaining agent for the employees.

Results of the votes at Lady-smith Forest Products, Mayo Lumber and CIPA Lumber is expected to be known Tuesday night or Wednesday. Roughly 350 employees are involved.

The PPWC Local 8, which represents 1,000 employees at the Harmac pulp mill, filed applications for certification at the mills earlier this year. The employees are represented by Duncan Local 1-80 of the IWA.

The votes were ordered by the B.C. Labor Relations Board and will be supervised by labor department officials.

Support Can Be Settled Later

OTTAWA (CP) — It is not necessary for a judge, when granting a divorce, to pronounce exact terms of maintenance at the same time, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled Monday.

As long as the judge rules that maintenance should be awarded at the time the divorce is granted, terms of the payments can be made later, the court said in a unanimous judgment.

The statements are contained in a judgment ordering Louis Zachs, a Vancouver real estate manager, to pay maintenance to his former wife, Josephine, and his infant daughter.

Mr. Zachs refused to pay maintenance to his wife on the grounds that the Divorce Act compelled judges to fix maintenance payments at the same time as granting divorces.

In the Zachs case, the judge said maintenance should be paid to the wife but ordered a hearing by the Supreme Court of British Columbia registrar to recommend the amounts.

Mr. Justice Ronald Martland, writing reasons for the court, said when Parliament used the words "upon granting a decree nisi of divorce" in relation to maintenance, "it was meant that it was only when a divorce was granted that the court acquired the necessary jurisdiction to deal with those subjects."

"The words did not mean that those subjects could only be dealt with at exactly the same time that the decree for divorce was granted."

The court also rejected arguments by lawyers for Mr. Zachs that Parliament cannot make laws on maintenance since they infringe on property and civil rights, a field set aside for the provincial powers.

Intervention Sought In Elevator Row

General contractors in British Columbia called on the government today to invoke compulsory arbitration if necessary to stop a renewal of the elevator constructors' strike Wednesday.

In a telegram to Labor Minister Bill King, the president of Construction Labor Relations Association, C. J. Connaghan, said in part:

"Mr. Minister, we strongly request that you and the government take such immediate legislative action as may be necessary to prevent a further strike from occurring and to effect a permanent settlement of this dispute."

Connaghan referred in his telegram to the fact that the governments of Alberta and Ontario ordered compulsory arbitration of the national strike which began last September and ended in late March and early April.

He agreed in an interview that with only a short time left before the threatened renewal of the strike in B.C., compulsory arbitration was about the only method left for resolution, but CLRA "was simply asking for 'whatever action is necessary' to avoid the strike."

Members of the B.C. Local 82 of the International Union of Elevator Constructors decided last week to give the five elevator companies until 4:30 p.m. Tuesday to agree to accept the Ontario arbitration decision (when it is made) as being applicable in B.C.

The elevator companies, Montgomery, Turnbull-Dover, Otis, "Armor and Westhouse, have said they will wait for the Ontario arbitration result before deciding if it will apply in other provinces.

B.C. members of the elevator union were on strike from Sept. 8 to April 3 but the B.C. Supreme Court ruled it illegal because provincial labor laws hadn't been followed. This was subsequently done and a strike vote taken.

Connaghan said in his telegram to King that the 850 member companies of CLRA "view with alarm the current stalemate" in the elevator dispute and in particular recent news reports in which the union indicated it will strike again.

"Your personal efforts to settle this dispute to date without resorting to government intervention are to be commended. However, events of the past two weeks involving the parties in this province leads the members of this association to the conclusion, reluctantly, that the parties are incapable of settling this dispute on their own," he said.

He said private citizens, workers and contractors in B.C. "as innocent parties to the dispute have been gravely injured and inconvenienced during the past eight months because of delay in work of almost $100 million worth of construction.

"These delays have led to untold hardships for the general public and especially for a great many senior citizens whose lives have been disrupted by the strike as well as causing a severe economic threat to the livelihood of a large number of B.C. businessmen."

Resumption of a strike will lead to a drop in construction employment opportunities at a time when job prospects should be on the increase, he said.

TOKYO (AP) — Japan and China have signed an agreement to lay an undersea cable between the two countries, the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported.

ATTEMPTED RAPE, MAN CHARGED

A charge of attempted rape will be read against a man in Duncan provincial court today following a weekend incident near Shawmigan Lake.

A spokesman for Duncan RCMP was reluctant to comment on the circumstances but said a woman hitch-hiker was picked up about noon Saturday and taken to the wooded area.

Further details will be available after the man's court appearance, police said.

Meanwhile, RCMP are continuing to comb the same area today for further clues to the murder of Victoria businessman Stan Wallis.

Wallis, 42, of 511 Whiteside, was shot with a .22 calibre weapon April 27. His body was discovered two days later but no gun has been found.

Police said today they would like to hear from anyone not already interviewed who had an appointment with Wallis on April 26 or 27.

Corwin's Amity Singers 'Fantastically Beautiful'

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Bach and the music of the 20th century.

If that sounds like a difficult combination, go and listen to the Amity Singers in concert tonight at 8 at UVic's MacLaurin Auditorium.

First performance of the program for the eighth annual scholarship concert, was given Sunday, and it was as thrilling an experience as any regular concert-goer has had this season.

What a fantastically beautiful and virtuosic instrument this ensemble has become under the direction of George Corwin.

Twenty-six fine voices woven together in a firm, balanced and flexible body of unflawed sound, Amity Singers is a group totally responsive to the musically astute and brilliant direction of the conductor.

They begin with Bach — the Motet VI, Lobet den Herrn, sung unaccompanied, and Cantata 150 with instrumental accompaniment.

And this is Bach superbly done. The moods of exaltation, of serenity, the pure smooth quality and texture of sound, the perfect balance of part singing, are classical perfection and at the same time, profoundly moving.

Only twice do soloists emerge from the group; soprano Karen Smith in the Bach, and mezzo Susan Word in the Debussy Trois Chansons, and in each case there are lovely young voices technically fully capable of their roles.

Following the Bach and an intermission, centuries are leaped to offer three Shakespeare songs by Ralph Vaughan Williams, the Debussy, Choral Dances from Gloriana by Benjamin Britten, and the exceptionally demanding — and exciting — choruses from Catulli Carmina by Carl Orff.

In each case the essential character and demands of the music are fully met, from the vitality of Williams, the subtle coloration of Debussy, the vivid individuality of Britten, to the power and passion of Orff.

Corwin, poised, precise and musically intense, handles the full-bodied, luminous sound from this disciplined group of mature but youthful singers with consummate artistry.

The pure legato is spun out silkily on firmly breath-supported tone. Intonation of the a cappella singing is always secure; swell is rich and sustained diminuendoes quite exquisite, and what a superb male sound this choir produces.

Not easily to be forgotten either, is the greatly satisfying addition in the Bach Cantata, of instrumentalists James Hunter, cello, James Furmeston, harpsichord, Rudolf Komorous, bassoon, and violinists Rollyn Morris and Richard Barker.

The reported plan to submit the Government St. mall proposal to the public for a decision sounds like a move of desperation by the city council. But if the public is to make a decision based on more than its choice of pretty sketches in a brochure, or on a straight pedestrian versus motorist basis, it will have to be provided with adequate information.

One of the first questions to be answered will be: where will the traffic go if Government St. is closed off? Some streets and intersections in the city are already showing signs of almost daylong congestion, because they are handling traffic created by one-way streets or other nearby restrictions. That is not to say that the changes should not have been made; but it is certainly to point out that displaced traffic turns up somewhere else.

"No Left Turn" signs concentrate traffic at other intersections;

one-way streets tend to direct traffic onto the next two-way parallel streets. Provision should be made for such changes in the traffic pattern; it is not enough merely to move a problem from one place to another.

Sooner or later the problem of curbside parking will have to be faced. The amount of traffic on Government St. at many hours of the day is now causing lineups to extend along more than one block and hamper cross-traffic. Unless some traffic can be directed off Government Street — and where will it go? — prohibition of parking there is inevitable.

The concept of malls is most attractive. Victoria has pitifully few areas that can even qualify for the name. Therefore creation of these "people places" should be encouraged and included in plans for betterment of the city. Unfortunately, the downtown district has so few north-south traffic arteries that Wharf, Government, Douglas and Blanshard are indispensable. To narrow them with parking, or even with desirable wide sidewalks and street plantings, seems a reversal of the process whereby, after decades of talk and the expenditure of thousands of dollars, the city got rid of the bottleneck in the "Dardanelles" just east of the Fort-Yates intersection.

For some of the situations, the only method of solution may be the experimental approach. Close off Government Street for several months and see what happens. Or narrow it to two lanes and see if we survive. Such an approach may be very helpful and need not be expensive. But it should be kept in mind that, when we come to permanent fixtures, we are not providing only for today's traffic problems but for those in the future as well. By all accounts, we haven't yet seen more than the fringes of what is in store.

Fighting the Child Commercial

According to recent assessment, Action for Children's Television, a United States organization fighting hard-sell commercials aimed at the very young, has made only limited gains in recent months. But Victorians, into whose homes the undesirable TV advertising flows as it does throughout the continent, can draw some satisfaction from the apparent determination of ACT to sustain its campaign.

Some minor accomplishments are reported. The American networks have fractionally reduced the number of minutes of advertising pressure included in children's programs; three major manufacturers of children's vitamins have taken their advertising off the air; and substitute newscasts suitable for children have been introduced between cartoons to lessen the intrusion of the hard sell. In addition, expert attention is now being devoted to the effect of the questionable commercials on children — a development which could provide more ammunition for ACT in future.

Internal policing by the networks and others, however, has failed to achieve the success it promised. FCC chairman Dean Burch recently stated that broadcasters have not yet met their responsibilities and commitments to children.

The problem involved in the children's commercials is basically economic. Opinions conflict on the means by which networks could gain compensating revenue for any lost by a more stringent application of control of the commercials. But the significant aspect of the situation at this time is the conviction of Action for Children's Television and others, including unorganized parents, that the cultivation of desires among youngsters for things of no benefit or value to them must be curbed. The fight continues and even if ACT is not able to report overwhelming advances, it is certainly not in retreat.

A Certain Rough Justice

NEW YORK — A lot of Americans thought George McGovern was hysterical last year when he said the Nixon administration was "the most corrupt in American history." But neither McGovern nor anyone who supported him should take pleasure in the considerable vindication they are now receiving. This grim spectacle of investigation, recrimination, and resignation, overshadowed as it is by the probability of criminal indictment, shakes not just "the Nixon administration" but American government, and to its roots.

Those roots lie in the confidence and trust of the American people. For two centuries, despite their amiable cynicism about many forms of graft and an almost admiring tolerance for colorful demagoguery, Americans have generally trusted their government—particularly that government most remote from them. In the 20th century, that trust concentrated itself almost fanatically in the presidency, as the one office capable of coping with the vast new concerns that rushed in at home and abroad. The result is a presidential government, in which the other branches serve as occasionally effective anchors to windward.

Shaken Confidence

Shake confidence in the presidency, therefore, and you shake confidence in the government. In the sixties, for millions of Americans, the war in Vietnam and its consequent deceptions and disillusionments first brought the office into distrust and contempt. Now the Watergate scandal is bound to extend that corrosion of confidence—particularly since the Nixon administration came to office in 1969, and stayed in after 1972, not least because so many Americans believed Nixon's pledges to restore confidence, re-establish authority and preserve traditional American values.

But it seems reasonably clear that crimes, including at least wiretapping, theft, burglary, breaking and entering, perjury, malfeasance in office, suborning perjury, bribery, forgery, obstruction of justice, various forms of conspiracy and numerous violations of both the election and campaign finance laws, have been planned, committed, connived at, condoned or covered up at high levels of the government (which is to say the presidency). The accompanying ethical transgressions—particularly the vile intrusion upon Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatric records—shatter even the most supple standards of personal or political conduct.

And no matter how strongly it may be asserted that Nixon knew nothing of any of this, and took strong action as soon as campaign contributions by the dairy industry, and the settlement in dubious circumstances of an important anti-trust suit against I.T.T.

This sad crumbling of an administration and Nixon's desperate efforts to retrieve a position that so recently appeared imperial may seem nothing more than good political fodder to some Democrats; others, like the governors who cancelled national chairman Robert Strauss's plan to make a television speech on the subject, surely realize that whatever partisan advantage may be derived from the Watergate crimes is minor when measured against the damage to the nation, its institutions, and its spirit.

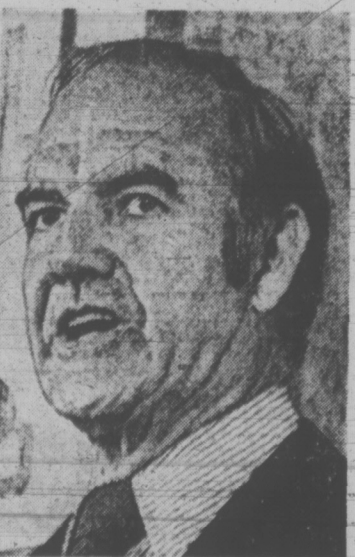

None Above the Law

The conclusion the Democrats as well as the Republicans would do best to draw is that the presidency is not an imperial office. No matter who holds it, neither he nor his men are above the law or beyond political accountability. There is nothing inherently ennobling or mystic in the office—nothing that makes ordinary humans superhuman—nor is there anything about mere power that enhances character. Rather, it is how presidents respond to their power—how they use it or refrain from using it—that can make them great, or make them corrupt.

Now two administrations in succession have tried to push beyond the limits of the office, the first in making war, the second in securing its power; one was rebuked politically, to the detriment of its laudable domestic purposes; the other has been criminally tainted, to the possible endangerment of its foreign policy goals and achievements.

No doubt there is a certain rough justice in both cases; it is even possible that in the perverse way of human nature, the presidency has been saved, not destroyed by these retributions; but if that is to be so, Nixon and his successors will have no greater task than to show that they are worthy of trust. After Vietnam and the Watergate, they had better not count on blind faith.

MAURICE WESTERN

Mr. Sharp's Critical Eye

OTTAWA — Mitchell Sharp's address to the annual meeting of the Canadian Press will be particularly gratifying to the more patient members of the community of Canadian political scientists. Once again it has been demonstrated that administrations are capable, in the course of very few months, of achieving remarkably clear perceptions of the errors of preceding administrations graced by the same distinguished personalities.

With the advent of Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the weaknesses and follies of the Pearson Government became evident overnight to forward-looking Liberals. This must have been helpful to political scientists as they warmed to the new and exciting course. Latterly, the second Trudeau government has been turning a critical eye on the first with the happy result that much is becoming plain which earlier could be merely surmised.

"Looking back five years," Mr. Sharp observed in a thoughtful fashion, "I am free to admit that we in the government were a bit ham-handed in the way we handled the NATO issue but it was fortunate that we made our mistakes early and had time to profit from them. To some the first part of this finding may appear more self-evident than the second. The important point is that the ham-handedness now bears an official stamp and becomes eminently suitable as a footnote to some authoritative treatise."

Reasonable Enough

Mr. Sharp went on to describe the manner in which the first Trudeau administration proceeded in its efforts to involve the public in the decision-making process.

"It all sounds reasonable enough," he said, "except that there was very little leadership from the government. In fact, the trumpet spoke with a most uncertain sound. Publicly, I advocated continued membership in NATO; publicly, my then colleague, Mr. Kierans, advocated withdrawal. The result was that our consultations with the public lacked focus. This was particularly true of our consultations with the academic community who wanted some government position to criticize; they were not accustomed to being asked to formulate policy."

Mr. Sharp is on to something here. The subject is fascinating and the minister should be encouraged to explore it in greater depth on subsequent occasions. If the uncertain trumpet uset the academic community, what did it do to our allies and other countries in a year of agonizing anxieties and international tensions?

There is a point to be added, in justice to Mr. Sharp. It is utterly impossible, and it never was possible, to believe that the ham-handed experiment originated in the mind of the minister of external affairs. In all probability, Mr. Sharp's present perception derives from the memory of past horror. His conclusion rings with conviction: "To put the matter bluntly, we should have reached agreement in cabinet, at least in principle, before seeking the reaction of the public. This, I suggest, is basic to our form of responsible government in a parliamentary democracy."

It would be absurd to describe this as a novel doctrine. After much that has happened, however, it is well that it should be re-stated and underlined.

Mr. Sharp went on to speak of "Foreign Policy for Canadians." It is implicit in his remarks that this flowed from the earlier experiment. Thus, he may not have been an author by choice. In any case, he certainly attempted a strengthen the Canadian economy and other aspects of our national life and in the process to reduce the present Canadian vulnerability."

At this point, patience is to be commended to the political scientist and, indeed, to the historian. Mr. Sharp's perspective is shorter and the Third Option may not appear to him with that clarity to be expected of a later minister of external affairs.

A comprehensive industrial strategy has been much commended in the last year or so by various economists, writers for the Science Council and industrialists sniffing subsidies in the political winds. But the concept becomes blurred the moment it is seriously examined. One minister has observed that we always did have an industrial strategy. The minister of trade and commerce prefers to speak of a set of strategies. It may even be the case that we have too many already and it is highly probable that we will develop more in ad hoc fashion as we go reactively along.

The "Third Option" may become more satisfying when Mr. Sharp and colleagues eventually succeed, if they do, in bringing it down from the clouds. It cannot be said that progress, up to the present has been particularly dramatic. To quote the minister in Toronto:

Third Option

"Just the other day for the first time a report to Cabinet passed under my eye which referred to the Third Option in support of its recommendations."

A reference is not much but it is something. Forward-looking political scientists should treasure this for its possible value as a footnote in some future year or decade.

Not everything which passes under the eye of a minister of external affairs is equally exhilarating. It is bad enough that we should still be required on occasion to react to our great neighbor. But it is sometimes even more distressing that the great neighbor reacts to us, thus creating new situations to which we in turn must adjust. Only last week a leading American senator — misled, as most American senators are — identified this country as a "political quagmire." Everyone must hope that this view does not become general in the great republic for there can be little doubt that on that day the lights will burn very late in the Palace of the Third Option which is now almost ready for occupancy by Mr. Sharp and his dedicated co-workers of external affairs.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of May 7, 1913:

For over two hours last evening the city council sought in vain to discover the source responsible for the leakage of information of a confidential character recently. Except to establish the points that no alderman gave out the information to the morning paper about the proceedings in camera of the council when City Clerk Dowler's case was discussed, and that no alderman supplied the copy of the estimates which were published in the Colonist while the matter was private, the aldermen did not get any farther. J. W. R. Macdougall, representative of the paper concerned, declined to reveal how the information came into his possession. He claimed newspaper privilege, and although the mayor tried in several instances to get at the story from another standpoint, the witness was firm and retired without contributing any material fact to the testimony.

Gradual Process

It is most interesting to learn in discussion with many European immigrants that the final take-over of their countries by Communists was always preceded by the gradual erosion of the people's rights by socialist governments. Slowly but surely these rights were legislated away and finally there was nothing to resist the final Communist takeover and too late people who thought only of the humanitarian aspects of socialism found themselves in the iron grip of state socialism or communism.

People should talk to those who have experienced in their own countries the gradual decline and final loss of all freedom as we know it.

The press will bear a heavy responsibility to be sure both sides are able to make their views public. — M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra St.

Superior System

If proof were needed of the superiority of the constitutional monarchy (involving a non-political, non-elected Head-of-State) the Watergate scandal has certainly provided it.

The Head-of-State should be a unifying force in a country where that supreme office is achieved by political election, it cannot help but be, to some degree, contentious and divisive.

The monarchy, on the other hand, not being an elective, political office, is naturally a unifying factor.

Hopefully, most Canadians will appreciate this point. — M. C. Manning, 1538 Beach Drive.

The Premier Has a Beef With Press

The Globe and Mail

WINNIPEG — Edward Schreyer, Manitoba's first New Democratic Party Premier and a seasoned veteran at 37, has taken upon himself the role of media critic lately and there's not much he sees that he likes.

It leads to an obvious question: Can a free enterprise press report and comment on the activities of a Socialist government in this country with impartiality?

Schreyer thinks it can—sometimes.

His brand of socialism is, by self-admission, flexible and undogmatic. This is underscored—and not very subtly—by the reading material available to visitors in his office: The Economist, The Financial Post, The Globe and Mail Report on Business, and a few other decidedly unsocialistic journals.

A Floating Vote

It's had to be this way, he said, in a recent interview. The NDP won a healthy majority in British Columbia with only a 5 per cent turnover in the vote, he said, but in Manitoba he had to hurdle a 19 per cent gap. Most of this figure has remained a floating vote, he said, and because of this he follows newspapers and television closely, convinced that the media are responsible for whatever image his government has.

Like many politicians who complain about the press, he has few specific examples to come up with, but talks of the accumulative effect "distortions" in the news and "malicious editorializing" have.

What burns him up is "the sort of thing" that appeared in the Winnipeg Free Press last April 4: a short editorial pointing out that Manitobans could feel some relief because their Socialist government had not gone as far as the one in Ceylon, under Mrs. S. D. Bandaranaike. He thought the editorial tried to equate a near-Marxist regime with the Manitoba government. He said this was an example of a vindictive and malicious press.

"I don't for a moment accept, on general principles, that a free-enterprise press is unalterably opposed to any NDP government, but if you want to get down to certain specifics I suppose I could make a bloody good argument to support the theory."

The Premier was speaking in his office at the Manitoba Legislature building. He is in the final stretch of his first term in office, and an election is looming in the near future.

"Certainly there are some newspapers where blind prejudice is the case, but when I look at the Winnipeg Tribune, The Globe and Mail, Montreal's Le Devoir, and to a lesser extent The Toronto Star and (Montreal) La Presse, I really have no fundamental complaint.

"On the other hand when one looks at the Winnipeg Free Press, the Regina Leader-Post and a few others I won't bother to mention (the later added the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix, which he said used to be a good newspaper), well, it's just incredible. Even the front pages—the headlines—are written by those who must also be deciding editorial policy which is bilious and inaccurate... Especially in the case of the Winnipeg Free Press this spills over into the composition of headlines. It's rather a serious charge and I don't make it lightly. Editorials can editorialize whatever way they like: that's accepted and understood as a necessary feature of a..."

Here Schreyer stumbled for words. It wasn't until I supplied what he was obviously searching for—free press—that I realized he simply had a block about using those two words when discussing an ideal. He was soon back on his train of thought, however, even warning to the subject.

One Has Been Fair

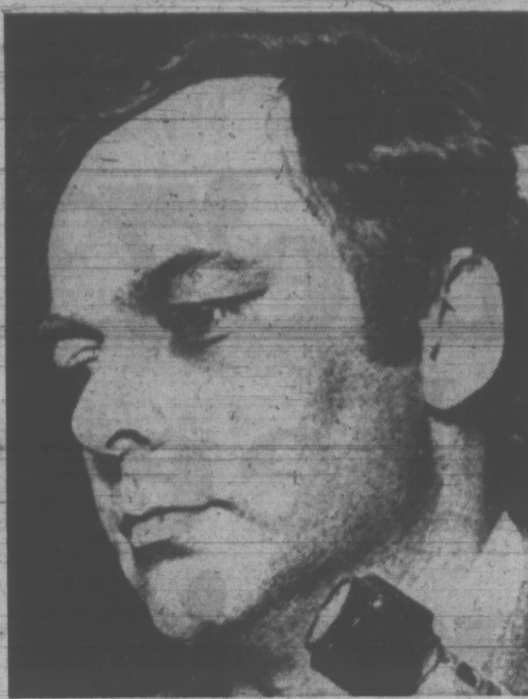

"The two metropolitan papers in Winnipeg provide a reasonably accurate picture of the contrasts in newspapers throughout the country. One (the Tribune) has been scrupulous and fair... In the case of the Winnipeg Free Press, the exact opposite is true."

"I'm not complaining about the working reporters, for I've not had any evidence that they were doing anything other than a fair report, or attempting to do one at least. But once they file their copy, what happens? It gets blue-pencilled, peculiarly edited. Strange goings-on. I've checked it out in my own way, casually, and I've had it confirmed that these strange things happen at the copy and headline desks."

When asked where his information was coming from, the premier said it was from the working reporters themselves, some still there "and others who have left."

He specifically referred to a two-month period when the NDP government was, trying to secure legislative passage for Autopac, the controversial compulsory automobile insurance package it created.

Asked later to give an example, he declined and said he couldn't think of one specific story or headline but was thinking rather of a general pattern of antagonism in the Free Press.

SCHREYER... 'bias and distortion'

"The bias and distinct distortion in the Free Press's editorials and on the front page news was blatant; just go to the morgue and look at the clippings. I can't quantify the damage this did, but it was there all right... Not once in the case of the Winnipeg Free Press was there a straightforward explanation of what we were trying to do. I don't argue with the right to editorialize, but surely it should be possible to get fair reporting on legislation..."

"In fairness, I should add that it was not the newspaper alone which drummed up the hysteria we experienced. It was a combination of the paper, some of the electronic media, and I must say a very effective PR campaign by the Insurance Bureau of Canada. These things together had us on the defensive and seriously on the ropes the entire period we were putting auto pact through the Legislature."

"In the first month of our government, you know, the Free Press egged on the business community to a fine pitch of self-induced hysteria. It stopped for about six months and then it began again with a vengeance. And, really, all through this period the Tribune was most fair, so that's why I can't generalize on the media."

Not a Conspiracy

Like most government leaders, Socialist or otherwise, federal or provincial, Schreyer feels that he does not have adequate facilities for getting his government's ideas and "program justifications" across to its population.

"There are three executive assistants and two secretaries in my office and that is the extent of possible public relations the premier's office is capable of. We can't do it in any detail or depth and feel very frustrated about it. That should be part of the press's function. Yet it's not because of any conspiracy to have silence reign on the part of the media. There does not seem to be similar arrangements that are possible in other countries—the United States for example—where if there is a major issue to explain, television network time is somehow made available and away they go. This is unknown in Canada, except with something as serious as the War Measures Act.

"There are a number of issues—auto insurance was one, natural resources development and the energy situation are others—where I really feel it would be in the public interest to speak directly to the people for 15 or 30 minutes to explain. But it's just not possible."

Lack of Depth

"Sure, sometimes there are guest shows, but by their very nature they seem to concentrate on a multiplicity of varying detail rather than go into depth on a particular issue and it is a matter of great frustration to me. I suggested in a casual way to some senior media people that some new arrangement should be possible. It wasn't of course, and I don't think it's spitefulness—they simply don't see how it can be done without being compromised. Anyway it's not being done and I think it's a pity."

The mention of CBC's The Nation's Business and Provincial Affairs—two brief formats for politicians of all parties to air their views and which are seen alternately once a week for five minutes—brought forth from Mr. Schreyer what only could be described as a condescending snigger.

"Look, I'll tell you something I think about the CBC that may surprise you. In terms of good public policy, I, like most of my colleagues in the NDP, have favored continued existence of a publicly owned broadcasting system. But let me tell you, we do it with great lukewarmness, with considerably subdued feelings. It is my most distinct impression that the CTV network and its local stations here have been far more judicious and fair in terms of equal time in news spots than the CBC, both nationally and provincially. I can't explain it, but I'm completely convinced there is a definite difference in treatment."

"The CBC tends to be much more large-L Liberally oriented than CTV. I think both the Conservative party and the NDP have cause for complaint—nationally and provincially."

'Old-Fashioned Journalism'

By DAVID S. BRODER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Vice-President Agnew, in his thoughtful Harding College speech on "the responsibilities of the news media in a free society," argued, as his central proposition, that "it is advocacy journalism more than any other factor that has caused the current ill-feeling between government officials and the opinion-making media."

That is a view that is worth examining, not only because of its source but because of its import for the future course of the Nixon administration.

A few more quotes are needed to understand exactly what the vice-president is saying.

He defines "opinion-making media" as those with "more than local impact—the large newspapers and magazines which cover the nation and the world with their own personnel, the networks, the wire services."

"The opinion-making media," Agnew says, are "a formidable social force in our society," and their "awareness of this power has caused them to re-interpret their role."

"Once journalists believed their job was to report as much as possible of what happened," he says. "Today, the view increasingly seems to be that the media should control the public reaction to what happened."

"This mind set," Agnew says, "is the essence of advocacy journalism." Advocacy journalism, he contends, "makes him (the reporter) a salesman for his point of view," and "in recent years, many of these views have tended to be anti-government."

It is because they are engaged in selling the public an "anti-government" viewpoint that these reporters "do not trust the government to be fair to them" and tend to cry "repression" whenever "government officials defend themselves from what they consider unfair slanting of news stories."

That is the Agnew argument, in barebones. How valid is it? First, it's obvious there are some journalists who espouse and practice the doctrine of "advocacy journalism" which the vice-president describes.

But those newsmen who "ferret out facts which support their own points of view" don't usually get or hold jobs on wire services, networks, or large newspapers. Most of the "advocacy journalists" are on magazines of opinion—or "underground" papers. It is not their work that has caused the serious disputes between the administration and the press in the past four years.

Those disputes—the battle over the publication of the Pentagon Papers, the months of controversy over the Watergate story—centered on the probing of some very hard-nosed reporters into the actions and decisions of some very important government officials. Those reporters are not a new breed, but a very old-fashioned, classic type in American journalism.

I was not involved in reporting either of these stories, but I know the men who were. They don't spend much time worrying about whether the government is being "fair to them." They know—as Mr. Agnew and many of his colleagues in the administration apparently still do not understand—that there is and should be a built-in conflict between the press and the government, no matter which party or which individual is in office.

That conflict results from the inevitable desire of men in power to conduct their business under maximum conditions of privacy. They rationalize this desire—and, again, I speak of all administrations—as being necessary to orderly decision-making, or to preserve the president's options or some other worthy goal.

But the penchant for secrecy can also be used—and has been, throughout our history—to conceal illegal activities and horrendous mistakes of judgment. It can be used to deny the public the information it needs to participate in democratic decision-making.

LEGACY OF 'AGENT ORANGE'

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

Harvard scientists have discovered that fish and shellfish caught in the rivers and off the coasts of South Vietnam near Saigon contain significant amounts of dioxin, a chemical known to cause severe defects in newborn children.

The fish, which are the staple diet of many Vietnamese, all came from areas that were heavily sprayed by low-flying U.S. aircraft during America's eight-year jungle defoliation campaign, and the obvious inference is that this defoliation mission, which employed a herbicide containing dioxin and known as "Agent Orange," has left a lasting legacy.

Studies have already shown a steady increase in the numbers of still births, placental tumors, and malformations in the country, but the Harvard study is the first to suggest a possible link between these phenomena and the spraying program.

The study's authors, Robert Baughman and Matthew Meselson, who were working under a research project financed by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, collected their fish and shellfish samples in 1970 from the Dong Nai and Sai Gon rivers and the coastline around Can Gio, all within 200 miles of the South Vietnamese capital. They found that the fish contained an average dioxin concentration of some 540 parts per trillion. Independent studies have shown that guinea-pigs fed with the chemical at concentrations of 600 parts per trillion had only a 50 per cent chance of survival.

The scientists, whose findings are contained in the current issue of Science Magazine, are cautious in the extreme in drawing any positive links between the Air Force spraying of "Agent Orange," the contamination of the fish, and the incidence of birth defects. Dr. Meselson would not go so far as to say that the spraying itself was responsible for the contamination.

There are also suggestions that the proposed sales of 2.3 million gallons of surplus "Agent Orange" to South American farmers may now be delayed or cancelled altogether.

nation: "No one could prove that at each of the sites we sampled some culprit didn't come along and dump some orange," he said. "You don't have to be a scientist, however, to figure out that this is very unlikely."

He pointed out, too, that his findings did not prove that the dioxin was accumulating in the fish—"it suggests it but does not prove it." Other studies, however, have shown that the chemical is cumulative in monkeys.

The two scientists are now analysing, in another project, the milk of a number of Vietnamese mothers, which they took at the same time as the fish samples and from approximately the same places. In the meantime Ralph Nader has demanded that two commercially available herbicides known to contain dioxin as a contaminant be immediately withdrawn from the market.

There are also suggestions that the proposed sales of 2.3 million gallons of surplus "Agent Orange" to South American farmers may now be delayed or cancelled altogether.

The Triumphant Coyote

HARPER'S

Mocking cries on edge of town

In the literature of the American frontier the coyote appears as an animal without redeeming virtue. The revisionist historians sometimes arrange a defense in behalf of drunken sheriffs, or Mexican bandits, but for the coyote no man says a kind word. Its name has become synonymous with everything that is low, mean, treacherous, and cruel.

Why, then, the impulse toward celebration when the coyote unexpectedly arrives in the forests of Maine? The impulse contains an almost subversive joyousness that contradicts most of what we have been told about Wyoming, Dodge City, and Manifest Destiny.

For more than 200 years the citizenry moved westward, clearing the land and bringing the first dim lights of civilization into the wilderness. Anything that impeded the mechanics of that illumination was condemned as evil and un-American. The rescue from barbarism required that the Indians be slaughtered and the buffalo destroyed, the rivers bridged and the grasslands marked off into forty-acre sections. Only the coyote survived the triumph of arithmetic.

Its persistence goaded men into a fever of rage, and very early in the nineteenth century the extinction of the coyote became a matter of public policy. The animal was killed by the hundreds of thousands, and yet it increased in numbers and extended its range, moving eastward against the lines of progress and the railroad. Its mocking cries on the edge of town continued to remind people of all that remained unknown and beyond the reach of the engines of technology.

Thus when the coyote appeared in Maine last autumn it aroused the old enmities. Many citizens of Maine still preserve the traditional view of the wilderness as a hostile force that must be confronted with equivalent violence. Their prejudice took the form of a vociferous lobby demanding a harsh and costly bounty law.

And yet, despite the emotional argument, the state legislature allowed itself to be persuaded, at least in part, by the more recent understanding of nature as an organism that depends upon apparent paradox. The defeat of the bounty law therefore implies a modification of the old jingoism that would subjugate all things to the arrogance of man's desire. It also implies a denial of the recently prevalent orthodoxy that holds that the machine is invincible and that the world is doomed. If the coyote can make it back to Maine, then it is conceivable that men can survive their own cleverness.

I.Q. of 145 and Can't Remember?

A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique for acquiring a powerful memory which can pay you real dividends in both business and social advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, necessary self-confidence and greater popularity. According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could improve themselves simply by remembering accurately everything they see, hear, or read. Whether in business, at social functions, or even in casual conversations with new acquaintances, there are ways in which you can dominate each situation by your ability to remember.

To acquaint the readers of this paper with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in remembering anything you choose to remember, the publishers have printed full details of their self-training method in a new booklet, "Adventures in Memory," which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. No obligation. Send your name, address, and zip code to: Memory Studies, 555 E. Lange St., Dept. 630-46, Mundelein, Ill. 60060. A postcard will do.

N-SHIP STALLED

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's first nuclear-powered ship remains immobilized at its base in a northern bay because fishermen there are fearful of nuclear pollution.

The nuclear ship development agency said it had planned to test the 8,350-ton ship Mutsu in the Bay of Mutsu last October, a month after construction ended. It was scheduled to go into commercial operation in March.

But repeated efforts have not convinced the fishermen that the tests will not contaminate the bay, an official said. He said the agency may be forced to carry out the tests outside Mutsu Bay even though this would be disadvantageous to the collection of some essential technical data.

The Mutsu is the world's fourth nuclear-powered commercial ship. The first was the U.S. Savannah, followed by the Soviet Union's Lenin and the Otto Hahn of West Germany.

Nimrods Ask Ban On Slash Burning

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The British Columbia Wildlife Federation wants the abolition of slash burning by the province's forest companies and alternatives to the practice studied.

In a final session Saturday of the federation's four-day convention here, delegates ignored the objections of spokesman for two forest companies, MacMillan Blodell Ltd. and Canadian Forest Products, to approve the resolution by a wide majority.

The resolution by South Okanagan Sportsman Club argued that slash burning is "a crime against natural laws" and that resulting air pollution is "a crime against the human race."

In a supporting brief the club warned that soil is maintained by the recycling of dead vegetable matter and slash burning "destroys in hours what it took nature hundreds of years to build."

In elections of officers, Ed Mankelov of Chemainus was elected president.

More than 70 resolutions dealing mainly with conservation and the control of wildlife resources were considered by about 135 delegates.

The question of whether hunters should be compelled to wear orange-colored clothing — said to reduce accidental shootings — generated hot debate in the third day of the convention.

Delegates voted to oppose the proposal despite arguments by Jim Hatter, B.C. fish and game branch director, who said orange clothing has reduced accidental shootings in the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

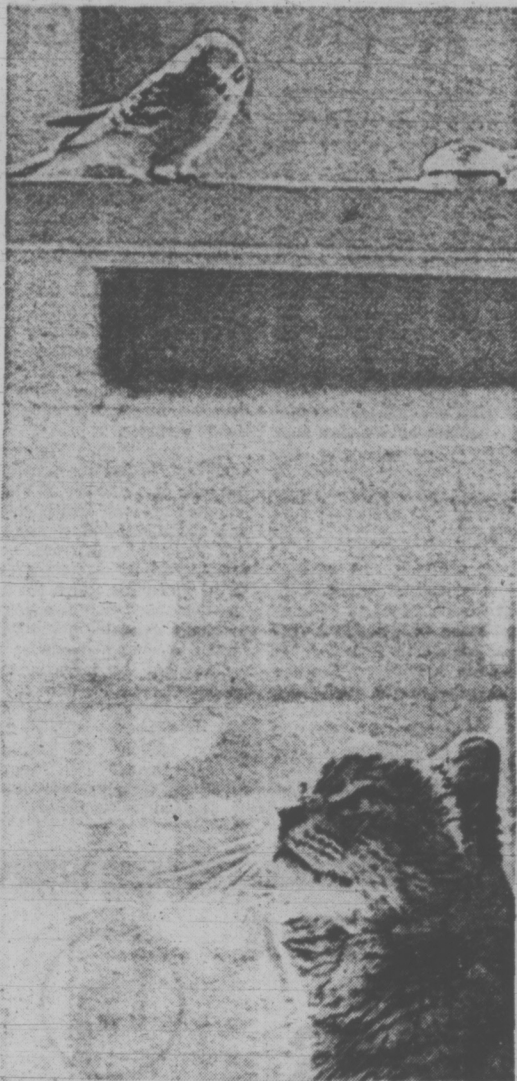

Hatter said he might recommend legislation making orange mandatory only for certain areas.

A resolution to end big game hunting within one half mile of major B.C. roads was similarly defeated. Proposed as a measure to attract game to areas adjacent to highways, the ban was termed unenforceable by many delegates.

Overwhelming approval was given to late resolution expressing alarm over the deterioration of the Thompson River near Kamloops, and calling on federal and provincial governments to investigate the problem.

Dealing with wildlife, the convention voted to request laws which would prohibit the hunting of animals on private game preserves, which the resolution states, "has nothing to do with sport."

In resolutions concerning land use, delegates voted that governments undertake studies to limit urban sprawl, that all private titles to lake and river beds revert without compensation to the crown and that mining companies planning exploration or development work should submit detailed plans for review by several government departments.

ON THE OUTSIDE looking in, Clyde the cat watches Bonnie the budgie with more than passing interest. These two natives of Saskatoon regularly enjoy each other's company, providing each stays on his own side of the window.

Psychiatry 'Under Attack'

HONOLULU (AP) — "Our profession is under attack" and, unless the trend is reversed, mentally ill in the United States could become medical outcasts, the president of the American Psychiatric Association said today.

Dr. Peggy C. Talkington of Dallas, Tex., said this could result from what he termed proposals by the government, segments of the public and even some psychiatrists to "separate the psychiatrist from his patient and psychiatry as a whole from the rest of medicine."

Such propositions are part of an effort to have the mentally ill included in a "quasi-scientific, so-called treatment program for masses of people on a nationwide scale," Dr. Talkington said in an address to the APA's 126th annual meeting.

"In spite of the range, breadth, and complexity of psychiatry and its many treatment modalities, we now hear — that psychiatry is limited to the single technical treatment modality of psychotherapy, that anyone can do psychotherapy and that, therefore, psychiatrists are unnecessary."

Dr. Talkington, a psychiatry professor at Southwestern Medical School at the University of Texas, said anti-psychiatry forces wrongfully argue "that only by breaking with medicine and abandoning patients can psychiatry become a prime force in bringing about the sweeping social changes said to be essential to building a healthy society."

He added: "In summary, then, I submit that, if the trend toward abandoning the medical model of treatment continues and if the trend toward lowering medical education standards continues unabated, the medical profession may, again, relinquish its psychiatric responsibilities."

Anglicans Again Talk Abortions

REGINA (CP) — Anglicans, their stand on abortion reaffirmed, have turned their attention to Quebec's controversial James Bay hydro project and to the question of priesthood for women.

In weekend sessions the 26th general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada endorsed the policy it has held since 1967 that abortions are morally acceptable under certain conditions and elected the church's new national executive council, which included 22 new members.

Resolution groups discussed priesthood for women Sunday night and the question will come to a vote before a plenary session at any time, said Most Rev. Edward Scott of Toronto, primate of the church.

A report on the $6-billion James Bay project was to be presented to delegates today by Rev. Lynn Ross, appointed by Archbishop Scott to look into the issues.

A majority of the 6,000 natives who will be affected by the project are Anglicans.

The general synod Saturday approved overwhelmingly two resolutions, one reaffirming the church's policy on abortions as contained in a 1967 brief to the House of Commons, and one asking a primate's committee to continue to study the question of human life and related problems and report its findings in November.

The first resolution, introduced by Dr. Douglas J. Broadwell, a Windsor, Ont., physician, commended the federal government for its present laws on abortions. It said the laws are acceptable to the church but should be enforced more rigidly to ensure abortions will not be available on demand.

It also called for wide distribution of the 1967 brief, as many of Canada's 1.5 million Anglicans are not familiar with it.

The 1967 brief said contraception is the preferred method to prevent unwanted pregnancies and recognized the right of the fetus to live, but added that "this right may be superseded by another right with greater claim to recognition."

It also said abortions are acceptable to the church when pregnancies result from rape or incest or seriously threaten the life or health of mothers, and "when diagnosis indicates there is substantial risk of fetal abnormality."

SHOULD HAVE CHOICE

The brief objects to abortions as a means to solve social problems, and says "no doctor, nurse, hospital employee nor any other person should be required to participate in any operation to which they have conscientious objection."

UC Asks Ottawa to Ban Alcohol, Tobacco Ads

A call for the federal government to ban all alcohol and tobacco advertising was approved Sunday by delegates to the B.C. conference United Church annual meeting in Naramata.

The advertising resolution had come from Victoria presbytery.

It urged the federal government in addition to work for an international ban on such advertising, noting that both B.C. and Saskatchewan legislatures had recommended such action.

Rev. Albert King of Metropolitan Church Victoria said the resolution did not question the right of a person to smoke or drink but did tackle the matter of reaping a profit by promotion of action injurious to health.

In another Victoria-sponsored resolution, the conference called for the United Church to continue producing copies of the traditional marriage service as well as a contemporary format.

King complained that headquarters no longer produces the traditional service and indicated there was a head office move to force contemporary use.

University of British Columbia Chaplain, Rev. George Hermanson indicated however that the old service had "sexist implications", an apparent reference to the tradition of giving the bride away.

Delegates said, however, that latitude in making both services available would do the church no harm.

HOBBIES, SKY-DIVING AT SCHOOL DISPLAY

Bread dough figurines, ceramics, sky-diving and a hot turkey supper will all be part of Hobbyrama '73 to be held Friday from 3 to 10 p.m. at Beaver Lake Elementary School, 4828 West Saanich Rd.

Craftsmen of all ages will be displaying batik, macrame, oil paintings and other work at the show.

Others will be demonstrating their hobby toys, making, jewelry, weaving, pottery, among others. Antique cars will also be on display.

The show is sponsored by the parents' auxiliary of the combined Beaver Lake and Prospect Lake elementary schools. Proceeds will help buy equipment for an adventure playground at the Prospect Lake School, plus other school equipment.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old Victoria man who stole 75 car keys, a tape recorder and a radio from a downtown Victoria car showroom was fined $250 and given a one-year probationary term by Judge William Ostler on Saturday.

John Doroche, of 1335 Stanley pleaded guilty last month to breaking into the used car lot of National Motors (Victoria) Ltd., on Yates.

A 17-year-old Saanich man was fined $350 for impaired driving, after appearing in provincial court Saturday.

David Bain Cumberland, of 874 Royal Oak Avenue, was stopped on Douglas at Cloverdale early Saturday morning.

Rodney Warren Antrobus, 27, of Sooke, was remanded in RCMP custody to Tuesday, when he will appear in Sooke provincial court. He was charged in Victoria with breaking and entering and theft at a neighbor's house on Sooke's West Coast Road.

City Layman Joins Anglican Executive

Ruth Scott of 812-450 Simcoe St., a longtime member of Christ Church Cathedral, has been elected to Anglican Church of Canada's National Executive Council (NEC).

She was one of 22 new members elected to the 45-member NEC in Regina on the weekend, and the only member from Victoria.

The new members include five bishops, nine clergymen and eight laymen. At the 1971 election, there were 26 new members — seven bishops, nine clergymen and 10 laymen — Most Rev. Edward Scott of Toronto, Primate, said in Regina Sunday.

Membership includes 15 each from the bishops, the clergy and the laity to give the three categories equal decision-making powers in the church's affairs, Scott said.

Former Victoria Woman Ordained Into UC

A former Victoria woman was ordained to the United Church ministry Sunday afternoon at Naramata.

Brenda Ferguson, who will serve three small churches in southern Manitoba, is a graduate of the University of Victoria and a member of Metropolitan United Church.

Her ordination came midway in the meeting of the B.C. Conference, United Church, which attracted more than 500 delegates to Naramata.

After graduation from UVic, Miss Ferguson took library training at University of Toronto and received her theological training at Emmanuel College, also in Toronto. She has worked as a clerk and librarian and also served an Anglican-United parish centred in the coal-mining town of Sparwood.

Hemorrhoids? New Anusol Plus will quickly ease the pain, soothe the itch, and cool the burning.

That's the promise we make for new Anusol Plus.

Because the pain of hemorrhoids can be intense, we designed new Anusol Plus to give you really fast relief.

To do this, it contains a topical anaesthetic.

Almost as soon as you apply it, you'll notice an easing of that throbbing, burning sensation. And, with it, the pain and itching will have all but disappeared.

And while Anusol Plus works quickly, the relief that it gives will last for hours.

Of course, easing the pain is just part of what Anusol Plus brand new formula does to help your hemorrhoids.

It contains a gentle decongestant to help reduce swelling and inflammation, plus two soothing antiseptic agents to curb the spread of infection.

To help shield tender tissues from irritation, it contains a rich, protective emollient.

One other thing. So the medication itself won't add to your suffering, new Anusol Plus comes in a silky-smooth cream. This means it goes on easily. Even on spots that are tender and inflamed.

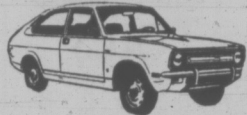

New Anusol Plus is now at your pharmacy, in cream form or suppository.

It'll give you fast relief from the pain, the itch, and the burning of hemorrhoids. That's a promise.

Suspensions: 'Unfortunate But Necessary Step' for 8

MONTREAL (CP) — The suspension of trading in eight stocks on the Montreal stock market last week has left the status of each company's shares up in the air and at least one firm says it has been harmed indirectly by the suspensions.

Since the suspensions, both stock exchange officials and the Quebec Securities Commission have emphasized that the suspensions do not reflect on the financial status of any of the firms.

Robert Demers, president of the commission, says the suspension is "an unfortunate but necessary step" in the commission's investigation of the affairs of the suspended brokerage firm of L. J. Forget and Co. Ltd.

Officials have also emphasized that trading in the companies will be resumed, but the questions of when, at what price and under what conditions remain to be answered.

Michel Belanger, president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, says it is possible one of the firms — Bio-Vita Ltd. — will be reinstated within two weeks.

However, he said all the companies will not be returned to trading at the same time, and in each case only if it is believed "orderly trading will take place."

He added that any resumption "will not necessarily be supported trading" whereby an attempt would be made to maintain the price of each stock at any particular level.

AWAIT REPORT

The exchange is awaiting the report of a chartered accountants' firm which has taken over administration of the brokerage firm temporarily, he said.

One broker who specializes in speculative stocks on the Canadian Stock Exchange said "there's no doubt that the companies have tangible assets, but the question is how they have been overvalued in the past."

Demers said in an interview he has no objection to immediate resumption of trading in any of the firms, but he said "I'm leaving it up to the companies to work things out with the exchange."

The eight stocks are: Belguim Standard Ltd., Bercam International Industries Ltd., Cunevisions Ltd., Fallinger Corp., Marvel Hemsley Ltd., S and L Diversified Ltd., Bio-Vita Ltd. and Modico Industries Ltd.

EXPECT PROFITS

Marvel Hemsley and Modico are traded over the counter while the others are listed on the Canadian Stock Exchange.

Melyin Hoppenheim, the president of Cinevision, told a news conference Thursday the suspension "indirectly caused the company some harm, particularly with suppliers, customers, banks and others who do not understand the operations of the stock market."

He said the company expects to show profits of between $175,000 and $200,000 for the year ended May 30, and is currently involved in the production and distribution of filmed plays in conjunction with New York producer Ely Landau.

Six of the plays, many awarded winners and starring well-known performers, have been filmed and will be shown across North America on a subscription basis, beginning in October.

The films were the basis of a stock issue last January, and Hoppenheim said there is no question of the trading suspension affecting the films.

"All of the money we raised — about $4.2 million — has been turned over to the production firm and the eight films have all been completed or are being completed," he said.

The president of Bio-Vita trading on the grounds his company is not involved with Onyx Investments Ltd., an investment firm headed by Irving Kott.

The trading hours, all Victoria time, are Vancouver 7 a.m. to 2 p.m., Toronto 7 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., New York 7 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., American (New York) 7 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Montreal and Canadian 7 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The seven trading hours of the Vancouver exchange is the longest on the continent except for the Pacific Coast Stock Exchange (San Francisco and Los Angeles) which opens at 7 a.m. and closes at 2:30 p.m.

Crude oil production is down slightly in British Columbia but natural gas flow is much higher than in 1972, the department of mines and petroleum resources says.

Oil flow in February dipped to 62,000 barrels a day, down from 67,000 a day last February. In January the flow was 61,000 barrels, down from 64,000 in January, 1972.

Natural gas production in February was 1.25 billion cubic feet per day, up from 1.12 billion in February, 1972.

January natural gas flow was 1.27 billion cubic feet, up from 1.12 billion a year earlier.

Effective today Enx Mines Ltd. has changed its name to Enx Resources Ltd. The shares are trading under the new name on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

In other mining news Northwind Mines Ltd. has acquired 56 mineral claims in the Omineca district for $7,500.

Northair Mines Ltd. has set up camp on its property 70 miles north of Vancouver, just outside Garibaldi Park, and plans a drilling program. Imperial Metals and Power Ltd. has started a drilling program seven miles south of Kamloops.

Briton Sees Opportunity For Canada

VANCOUVER (CP) — The leader of a British trade promotion tour said there is "enormous opportunity" for Canadian exporters to expand their business into Europe by funneling it through Britain.

Bryan Garrard, vice-chairman of Westminster Chamber of Commerce, and seven other men are touring Canada and the Western United States.

He said Britain's entry into the European Economic Community could be of significant benefit to larger Canadian firms already doing business in Britain.

He said the degree of interest British exporters would have in the EEC would depend upon their type of business.

"In heavy industry, the only way Britain can compete with North America is by teaming up with European communities," he said.

The group has already visited Montreal and Toronto, and moves on to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Chemalloy

Chemalloy Minerals Ltd. announced it has agreed to sell an additional 125,000 pounds of cesium oxide to the Soviet Union for use as an ionizing agent in a new method of generating electricity by direct heat conversion.

President D. T. Winchell said Chemalloy has the largest deposit of cesium in the free world at its mine at Bernice Lake in eastern Manitoba. The company has delivered 250,000 pounds of cesium oxide to Russia in the last two years.

Carma Developers

Carma Developers Ltd. earned $390,000 or 24 cents a share on sales of $3 million in the three months ended March 31.

Comparable figures for 1972 were not available because of different accounting procedures and a switch to being a public company.

However, in the first half last year, Carma earned $230,000 on sales of $2.8 million.

Second quarter results this year are expected to be better than the first quarter, said controller R. F. Leland.

Toronto Star

Toronto Star Ltd. reports net profit for the six months ended March 31 of $3,531,000 or 48 cents a share, up from $1,714,000 or 24 cents in the corresponding period a year ago.

Operating revenue rose 25 per cent to $45,808,000 from $36,624,000.

The outlook for the balance of the current fiscal year is favorable, he said, but net profit in the second half will not likely match first-half results, mainly because of delivery cost increases in July.

Fast-Skating Habs Take Charge

CHICAGO (CP) — Montreal Canadiens could be shouldering the Stanley Cup for the 16th time since 1927 Tuesday night, a National Hockey League record, and the man who carries it could be playing his last game.

Thirty-seven-year-old Henri Richard has provided an inspiration to the younger players this season, and it was never more in evidence than Sunday's 4-0 victory over Chicago Black Hawks that gave the Canadiens a 3-1 edge in the best-of-seven NHL final.

"The way he's skating now he's good for five more years," said Marc Tardif, who scored the first goal and set up the insurance score by Yvan Cournoyer in a game that was dominated by Montreal skaters.

"There are a lot of guys 25 years old in this league who should be retired before Henri. He just keeps skating all the time while they seem to be standing around."

Richard, the greying Montreal captain and brother of Hall of Famer Maurice (Rocket) Richard, didn't pick up a point against the Hawks, but it was obvious from his efforts the youngsters on the team were following his lead.

Richard has said on occasion he will be retiring after this, his 18th season in the league. He has, however, hedged on, making a total commitment to its retirement, saying he will make his decision known after the playoffs are over.

The goal by Cournoyer was his 12th of the playoffs and left him one away from the postseason record held by teammate Frank Mahovlich.

Chuck Lefley and Claude Larose completed the Montreal scoring, Lefley making it 3-1 just 90 seconds after Cournoyer's goal as Montreal demoralized Chicago's offence after skating off a penalty to Guy Lapointe.

"I can't recall ever seeing a team under such extreme pressure," said Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden of the assault on his counterpart in the Chicago goal, Tony Esposito.

"They (Canadiens) weren't just moving the puck around casually, they were going for the net all the time."

The Hawks have lost 13 straight playoff games on Montreal ice and Hawks centre Pit Martin said the odds are against their breaking that string Tuesday in the fifth game.

Ex-Canadien Ralph Backstrom, however, was hopeful. "I can't see them playing much better," said Backstrom. "But their defence played exceptionally well."

"If we looked bad," said Backstrom, "it was because they made us. They controlled the game."

How well the Montreal defence, led by Lapointe, Serge Savard, Pierre Bouchard, Larry Robinson and Bob Murdoch, controlled play was apparent from the number of saves Dryden had to make in chalking up his first shutout in 41 playoff games.

The Montreal goalie had to make just 19 saves and he counted the tough ones on one hand later in the Canadiens locker room.

"I can recall a couple of hard ones in the second period," Dryden said. "And there was one by Dennis Hull late in the game."

It marked the first time Chicago had been blanked in 69 playoff games.

Jacques Lemaire, who along with Tardif and Cournoyer gave the Canadiens their biggest scoring threat Sunday, credited Montreal's skating with keeping the Black Hawks bottled up in their end most of the game.

"We were getting on top of them and they couldn't skate," said the Canadiens centre. "Skating made the big difference, but that Esposito made some real good saves."

Whalers Challenge For Stanley Cup

BOSTON (CP) — New England Whalers won the World Hockey Association playoff with a 9-6 victory over Winnipeg Jets Sunday and club president Howard Baldwin issued a challenge for the Stanley Cup.

Baldwin said the Stanley Cup, now emblematic of the National Hockey League Championship, remains a challenge trophy and called on this year's winner to engage in a one-game, neutral-site playoff.

"Baldwin said the challenge is 'meant in no disrespect to either of those two fine teams or the National Hockey League."

"This is a challenge intended only to restore to the people their right to see a true champion decided in this, the world's fastest sport."

The Stanley Cup was donated in 1893 by Frederick Arthur, Lord of Stanley, a challenge trophy for amateur hockey teams. It eventually became the sole possession of the professionals however, and since 1910 has been regarded as the NHL's most prized possession.

Winnipeg playing-coach Bobby Hull, a 15-year NHL veteran who played on the 1960 Chicago Stanley Cup champions, said the trophy "is a challenge trophy... the NHL can't really refuse the challenge."

New England coach Jack Kelley said it "would be a great honor to go up against the eventual NHL winner."

"I'm not looking at this through rose-colored glasses. I know where the talent lies but they'll have to have to let us play for it sometime."

"They laughed at the Jets too," he said in reference to New York Jets, "the first American Football League team to win the Super Bowl."

Centre Larry Pleau, the former Montreal Canadian who scored three goals to pace New England to Sunday's victory, said he would definitely be interested in playing the Canadiens but "that's something for the future... it won't come right away."

The Whalers won the best-of-seven series against the Jets in five games, and 11,186 Boston fans swarmed on the ice after the Sunday title-clinching win.

Trailing 6-2 early in the second period, Winnipeg rallied to cut the deficit to 6-5 early in the third before Pleau scored a pair of goals to shut off the threat. Whalers led 5-2 in the first period.

Pacers Tie Hoop Final

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — George McGinnis and Darnell Hillman led Indiana Pacers to a 90-86 victory over Kentucky Colonels Saturday, tying the American Basketball Association championship playoff series at two games apiece.

McGinnis scored 20 points, 12 in the first half, and Hillman added 17, seven in the critical fourth period.

Dan Issel led Kentucky with 21 points but contributed only two in the fourth period.

Fifth game will be played at Louisville Tuesday night, with the sixth back here Thursday night.

THERE WAS A STORY behind Bruce Logie's victory in Times Bowler-of-the-Year tenpin rolloffs Sunday. Listening intently as Bruce

Bruce Used Nine-Strike Surge As Helen Took Steady Route

By DOUG PEDEN
Times Sports Editor

Helen Young and Bruce Logie took different routes Sunday at Mayfair Lanes, but both arrived at their intended destinations in the 10th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Year tenpin rolloffs.

Competing in the rolloffs for the 10th time, Mrs. Young grabbed an early lead and fashioned a steady, front-running ride to the women's title.

Helen opened with a 212 game and followed with tallies of 198 and 179 for a three-game total of 589, 15 pins in front of runner-up Charlotte Stossel and 23 in front of former-champion Lorna Pollock.

NINE STRIKES

After notching 204 in his opening game, Logie hit a rocky road in his second effort and appeared out of the running as he managed only a 157 count and skidded down to 14th place among the 22 male finalists.

Then Bruce made a slight change in his delivery and staged a brilliant charge down the home stretch, zooming to the men's crown on a spectacular string of nine successive strikes.

Working on perfect game when he stepped to the line in the 10th frame of his final game, Logie watched his ball hook in a bit too tight on the headpin and leave two pins standing.

He picked up the spare and counted seven on his last ball for 275 game and a series total of 636.

That was enough to wreck the hope of Jim Begg who had finished earlier with a series total of 626, which included a sizzling 243 second game.

In third place, three pins behind Begg, was veteran Andy McLeary, who closed with 226 for 623.

BONUS AWARD

Mrs. Young and Logie each collected a Times Trophy for a first rolloff triumph and Helen picked a bonus award of $100 as a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times.

Sunday's contestants qualified for the rolloffs by winning weekly awards in the 26-week Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition, which is open to all bowler rolling in league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes.

High scores are no strangers to the 36-year-old Logie, who started bowling fivepins when he was 13 and switched to tenpins 13 years ago. Along the way, Bruce has twice rolled 279 games and has notched several tallies over 260. In two leagues this season, he compiled averages of 181 and 178.

Appearing cool and confident as he stepped up for the 10th frame in his final game, Bruce said later that he was "shaking like a leaf" knowing he had a chance for his first major win if he could collect a mark.

"In the last frame of the second game, I decided I was letting my arm swing away from my body," Logie said in explaining his switch in delivery. "So I decided to keep it in-tight during the third game, although I figured I had washed out my chances."

"It worked, but there's always luck when you run up a string like that."

Victory in the distaff division capped a fine season for Mrs. Young, who racked up the highest averages of her career in league bowling this season, notching marks of 174 and 172.

She is also in line to collect some extra cash after competing last week in the Women's International Bowling Congress tournament at Las Vegas. At that event, Helen fired her best-ever single game — 254 — which should be good for a part of the prize money when the tourney is completed.

Former holder of city championships in singles, doubles and team events, Mrs. Young just concentrated on getting the ball out in front after getting away to a good start.

"There was nothing spectacular, it was just a steady effort," she commented after never failing to hit the headpin on her first delivery in the three games. "I had one blow and three splits. And I was lucky."

National Record Set By UBC Relay Team

VANCOUVER — Jill Pel-land was the only Victoria athlete scoring a victory as three records, including one national mark, were set Saturday at the 25th annual Vancouver Relays track and field meet.

University of British Columbia women's team established the Canadian mark in the 4 x 800-metre relay with a time of 9:15.4 minutes, eclipsing the old record by 1.4 seconds. Vancouver Olympic Club "B" finished second and tied the previous record.

Patti Johnson of Seattle set a meet record in the women's 100-metre hurdles with a time of 13.7 seconds, a second off the old mark. Wendy Taylor of Vancouver placed second and Miss Pelland, who won the 200-metre hurdles in 29.2, was third.

Mike Cairns of Vancouver set the other meet record by tossing the hammer 59.41 metres, knocking 13 metres off the former standard. He was also named the outstanding athlete of the meet.

In team competition, VOC captured the women's title with 73 points, 10 more than UBC. Spokane Community College collected the men's laurels with 81 points, beating runner-up UBC by 21 points.

Brentwood Crews In Winning Form

BURNABY — Brentwood College crews won three of eight races and Shawinigan Lake Boys School finished with two wins Sunday in the Burnaby-Lake Rowing Regatta.

Brentwood continued to show top form in preparation for defence of its national high school eights title in St. Catharines, Ont., June 2 by streaking to a two-and-a-half-length win over Shawinigan Lake in the glamor heavyweight eights race. Green Lake School of Seattle was third. Brentwood's time for the 1,500-metre course was four minutes, 42.2 seconds.

Brentwood also won the lightweight eights in the fast time of 4:52.0. The Canadian lightweight high school title was won in St. Catharines last year with a time of 5:01.

Green Lake was second in the lightweight eights, Lakeside School, also of Seattle, was third and Shawinigan Lake was fourth.

Brentwood's other win was in the lightweight fours where the school's crew posted a time of 5:30.3. Green Lake and Lakeside tied for second and Shawinigan Lake was fourth.

Shawinigan Lake won both the junior varsity eights in 5:33.2 and the junior varsity fours in 5:35.

Green Lake won the heavyweight fours with Brentwood in second place and Shawinigan Lake third and Lakeside picked up victories in both the novice eights and fours events.

St. George's School of Vancouver also took part in the regatta.

MIRACLE NOBODY KILLED IN WILD, 19-CAR PILEUP

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — David Pearson rode a Mercury to an easy victory in the Winston 500-mile stock car race Sunday after a frightening, high-speed crash eliminated three of his chief rivals and 15 of the original 60 starters.

Pearson, 38, managed to work his way through the wreckage left from the 190 miles-an-hour pile-up and came home a full lap ahead of Chevrolet-driving Donnie Allison on the 2.66-mile Alabama International Speedway. Third place went to Benny Parsons.

It was Pearson's fifth straight triumph, four of them at 500 miles, and he won $26,093 from the $160,000 purse.

His average speed was 131.956 m.p.h. despite four slowdowns that consumed 53 laps. The massive crash involving 19 cars occurred on the 10th of the scheduled 188 laps around the steeply-banked speedway, acclaimed as the fastest racing plant ever built.

It started when the engine broke in a Mercury driven by Ramo Stott of Keokuk, Iowa. Stott, who placed second in a race at Talladega last August, crashed into the concrete outer barrier and then into the retaining wall guarding the back stretch infield area.

Rival Teams Flounder Far Behind Dolphins

It was simply no contest in the race for team honors at Crystal Pool.

Powerful Canadian Dolphin Swim Club of Vancouver continued its overwhelming domination Sunday in the second annual Victoria Invitational swim meet, finishing more than 900 points clear of the field.

Right from the start it was obviously Dolphins' meet and only the margin of victory was in doubt.

Dolphins led nearest rival, Jasper Place Swim Club of Edmonton, by 141 points after Friday night's finals and stretched their lead over Totem Lake Swim Team of Kirkland, Wash., which moved into second place, to 542 points after Saturday's program.

By the time the 24-club meet was over Sunday, Dolphins had chalked up an incredible 1,574 points to finish 936 points ahead of Totem Lake.

Jasper Place finished third with 602 points and then there was a big drop to Edmonton's Y Torpedoes, who were fourth with 219 points.

Foot Hills Swim Club of Calgary was fifth with 187 points, Killarney Swim Club of Calgary was sixth with 180 points and Port Alberni Aquatic Club, which was fourth Friday but dropped to fifth Saturday, fell further Sunday to finish in seventh spot with 171 points.

The other Vancouver Island clubs competing didn't do too well against the tough opposition. Victoria Olympians finished 18th with 33 points, Victoria Flying Y placed 19th with 18 points and Juan de Fuca Cohoes had 12 points and were in 20th place.

The strong Dolphins led from start to finish in winning both of the last relays — the men's and women's 400-metre medley events. In the men's relay, Dolphins were first, second and fourth, and in the women's race, Dolphins teams placed first and fourth.

Bruce Robertson of the Dolphins, who won two events Saturday, won the men's 100-metre butterfly Sunday with a time of one minute, 0.8 seconds.

Sunday's only double winner was Becky Smith of Royal Glenora Swim Club of Edmonton. She edged Leslie Cliff of the Dolphins to take the women's 200-metre individual medley in 2:32.6. Miss Cliff's time was 2:34.8.

Then the Edmonton swimmer just beat out Jennifer McHugh of the Dolphins, a double winner herself Saturday, to win the women's 100-metre butterfly in 1:11.2. Miss McHugh's time was 1:11.7.

Scott Lautman of the University of Washington, who won the 1,500-metre freestyle Friday and the 400-metre individual medley and 200-metre butterfly races Saturday, scored his fourth victory Sunday in the men's 200-metre individual medley. His time was 2:18.1.

Only one national age group record was set Sunday — by Graham Smith of Royal Glenora Swim Club. His time of 2:40.7 when finishing fifth in the men's 200-metre breaststroke was a national record for 13 and 14-year-olds.

At MacLeod's route from work to home happens to run by the golf course, and the 32-year-old teacher figures that may be one of the intangible factors which helped him to the Vancouver Island Open match-play golf final for a second time.

More tangible was MacLeod's 4 and 3 victory over Greg Barnes in the 36-hole semi-finals at Royal Colwood on Sunday. That set up the "friendly final" with an old-time pal, Bill Wakeham.

Wakeham, establishing an appearance record with his seventh trip to the final, made it with a 5 and 3 decision over Uplands' Mike Gray.

That flavors next Sunday's 36-hole playoff at Glen Meadows strongly "of Cowichan." That's where Wakeham is resident professional and where MacLeod teaches school.

Cowichan also will be represented in the handicap final. Les Atchison made it by defeating Tom MacIntyre of Gorge Vale, two up. The 31-year-old Cowichan golfer will face Art Binks, who won his way to the final by edging Gorge clubmate Harry Panteluk one up.

MacLeod still maintains membership at Gorge Vale but because he works and lives in the Duncan area, preferred to be declared a representative of the Cowichan club.

That being his wish, next Sunday's playoff for the CFAF Trophy will mark the first time a Victoria-area club has not been represented in the Island final.

Both MacLeod and Wakeham were one up after the morning round and both pulled away with closing kicks to end their respective matches on the 15th green in the afternoon.

The 25-year-old Gray went three up on Wakeham after 11 holes. The favored pro squared the match on the 16th, went ahead on the 17th, but fell back again when Gray won two of the first three holes starting the afternoon round.

From that point (the 22nd), Wakeham played the remaining 11 holes in three-under-par figures. It was a pace Gray couldn't match.

Barnes, Cedar Hill's 25-year-old representative, went one up on the fifth, one down after 18 and all square after 20 holes. MacLeod then went ahead by winning four of the next five holes.

MacLeod carded an approximate 73 in the morning and was six over par for the 15 holes played in the afternoon on a windy day that created clubbing problems for all finalists.

Wakeham had an approximate 75 in his morning round and was one under for the 15 holes he played in the afternoon.

Barnes generally matched MacLeod's steadiness until the Cedar Hill player's putting stroke suddenly went sour on the stretch between the 21st and 25th holes. Barnes three-putted three of the five greens.

MacLeod felt happy about his overall game.

"I'm in better physical shape for this time of year than I have been in several years," he said. "Also, I've been playing a lot more than I normally do at this time of year."

"One of the reasons is because the golf club is on my way home from school. It's very convenient for me to pop in and hit a few balls."

Third Win for Crampton

HOUSTON (AP) — Australian Bruce Crampton scored his third victory of the season Sunday, winning the Houston Open with a front-running 72 in the final round. The win vaulted him into the season's leading money-winning spot.

The curly-haired veteran picked up $41,000 from the total purse of $205,000, pushed his earnings to $153,678 for the year and moved past idle Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino into the top spot on the money list.

Crampton, 37, who earlier this season had scored consecutive triumphs at Phoenix and Tucson, joined Nicklaus as the only three-time winners this year and moved within sight of $1 million in career earnings.

He went past South African Gary Player into fifth place on the all-time money winning list with a $945,121 total for his career that began in 1957 when he came to the United States to compete in the Masters as the 20-year-old Australian Open champion.

Crampton, who had rounds of 67 and 66 Friday and Saturday, played it conservatively in Sunday's final 18 holes on the 6,905-yard Quail Valley golf club course. He finished with a 277 total, 11 under par and a single stroke in front of charging Dave Stockton.

Stockton, a former PGA national champion, birdied three of the last four holes for a 67

and 278 total. Crampton led by four strokes when play started in the cloudy, threatening weather and eld an advantage that ranged from three to five strokes until Stockton uncorked his birdie burst at the end.

Lanny Wadkins, the youthful winner of the Byron Nelson Classic just a week ago, took third alone at 281 after matching par 72.

Former Masters champion Charles Coody and longshot Leonard Thompson followed at 282. Thompson had a 70 and Coody's 69 included an eagle two and a double-bogey six on consecutive holes.

RANKIN TOPS TOURNEY AS OPPOSITION FADES

RALEIGH (AP) — Judy Rankin watched her opposition fade Sunday after scoring a final-round 72 and won the $4,500 first prize in the Raleigh women's golf tournament with a one-over-par 217.

Jo Ann Prentice, who started the day tied for the lead, shot a five-over 77 and finished tied for fifth. Kathy Whitworth, who started one stroke back, could do no better than 75 and a tie for third.

Only Chako Higuchi, one of four Japanese players on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, made a move at Mrs. Rankin, shooting a 70 to finish two strokes behind at 219 and win $3,400. Gale Denenberg also had a 70 and tied for third with Miss Whitworth at 221, winning $2,565.

Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., shot a 78 for a 227 total and $288. Sandra Post Elliott, formerly of Oakville, Ont., had a 79 for 231 and $197.

Johnson, Fox Sparkle In McGinnis Openers

Ross Johnson checked in with a fancy introduction, Ken Fox indicated this could be a "new season," while Royal Oak and Mike's Sporting Goods weren't "sports" against a pair of highly-touted squads.

Those were some of the highlights as the expanded Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's Softball League opened the 1973 campaign in four different parks at the weekend.

Johnson, recently arrived from Port Alberni, checked in with a no-hitter Saturday as Century Inn swept a pair of games, 4-2 and 5-0, from Port Angeles.

Fox, one of the district's brightest young pitchers who was plagued by wildness while performing with Butler Brothers last season, walked only two and was in charge all the way as Royal Oak upset defending champion Bell's Men's Wear 3-1 Sunday at Heywood Avenue.

There was a surprise at Central Park as Mike's stung Seaboard Construction, the class of the Major Men's League last year, 7-3.

Labatts overpowered CFB Esquimalt 11-1 in another game at Heywood while Six Mile House embarrassed the Merchants at Sooke, 16-2.

Feast of Goals In Junior Boxla

Saannah E. J. Hunter steam-rollered Richmond Roadrunners 23-9 Sunday in an Inter-City Junior "B" Lacrosse League game in Richmond.

In another game at Memorial Arena, Burnaby Cablevision tripped Victoria Island Pacific Oilers, 17-8.

Mike Wilson and Kevin Alexander led Saannah with four goals each while Lee Hegan and Curt Robb added three goals apiece. B. Sawko paced Richmond with three goals.

Kelly McLeghegan sparked the Cablevision victory with three goals and Stu Thompson fired five goals for Oilers.

Elsewhere, Richmond Roadrunners handed Victoria McDonalds an 11-9 loss in a Pacific Junior "A" League exhibition tussle at South Delta Arena.

Harvey Olson was high gun for Richmond with three goals while Dan Green notched the same number of goals for Victoria, which led 3-2 after the first period but fell behind 6-5 by the end of the second.

Secretariat Charges to Wire

There Won't Be Many Testing Secretariat in the Preakness

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Secretariat, his image shining brighter than ever, now takes on the task of trying to win the Triple Crown and his opposition might not be too great, at least in numbers.

"He ran pretty good for a crippled horse," jockey Ron Turcotte said Sunday after Secretariat wiped out rumors that he had a knee problem with an overwhelming victory in the Kentucky Derby.

"You know something — he might have run that in 1:56 if he was all right."

With his stature damaged by an upset loss in the Wood Memorial April 21 and rumors sweeping Churchill Downs Saturday that he had hurt himself and might even be scratched, Secretariat responded by beating Sham by 2½ lengths in a record time of 1:59 2-5 for the 1¼-mile Run for the Roses.

"There won't be many trying him in the Preakness," said trainer Lou Goldfine, adding that he was taking Shucky Greene, who finished sixth, and My Gallant, who finished ninth, back to Chicago.

UNCOMMITTED

"I'm going to weigh things over," said trainer Bill Resquet, whose Our Native finished third, 10½ lengths back of the winner.

One of those expected to test Secretariat in the Preakness, the second Triple Crown race at Pimlico May 19, was Sham.

Two of Sham's teeth were loosened when he bumped his head in the starting gate and they were removed after the race. However, trainer Frank Martin said Sham ran a fine race and there were no excuses.

Martin also will send two other colts to Pimlico — Knightly Dawn, who won an allowance race Saturday and the lightly raced Beautiful Music.

Others being mentioned for the 1 3-16-mile Preakness were Aljabin; Stop — the Music; Impecunious, who missed the Derby because of a heel injury, and Step Nicely, a stakes winner as a 2-year-old. None raced in the Derby.

MOVING TODAY

Secretariat was scheduled to go to Baltimore today while Angle Light, his stablemate, was to be sent back to New York. Angle Light, owned by Ed Whittaker of Toronto, finished 10th in the Derby.

Only eight three-year-olds have won the Triple Crown of the Derby, Preakness and 1¼-mile Belmont Stakes and the last to do it was Citation 25 years ago.

Meadow Stable, Turcotte and trainer Lucien Laurin won the Derby and Belmont with Riva Ridge last year but Riva Ridge finished fourth in the Preakness.

Turcotte, from Grand Falls, N.B., became only the third rider to ever win the Derby two years in a row.

"If those other horses were running down the home stretch, then I was flying," the jockey said after bringing Secretariat from last at the start to take the lead in the stretch, breaking the Derby record of 2:00 set by Northern Dancer in 1964.

SETS MONEY RECORDS

For owner Mrs. John Tweedy of Meadow Stables, the victory was worth $155,050, of which 10 per cent went to Turcotte.

The total purse, with 13 three-year-old thoroughbreds running was a record $198,800 and an American track betting record was set when the crowd of 134,476 at Churchill Downs wagered a total of $7,627,965 on 10 races.

Betting on the Derby itself totalled a record $3,284,962. Secretariat, the solid favorite, returned $5, $3.20 and $3 and Our Native's show price was $4.20.

Secretariat, the big chestnut son of Bold Ruler, made his move almost without effort and Turcotte had only to tap him lightly with the whip as he charged down the long Churchill Downs stretch.

Laffit Pincay Jr., aboard Sham, said he felt the colt was improving and that

"maybe we'll get them next time."

Turcotte said he had been sure that Secretariat hadn't run his own kind of race when he was handed a solid defeat in the Wood Memorial.

"He was last at the first part of the race and I just dropped my hand on him and let him run his own race," Turcotte said. "He was doing fine on his own."

The victory was Secretariat's third in four starts this season. His loss in the Wood Memorial was the only time he hasn't finished first since his debut as a two-year-old.

Secretariat found himself ahead of only two horses as he passed under the finish line the first time around, with a mile to go. But within the next quarter mile, Turcotte had him in sixth position on the rail.

Turcotte didn't begin his big move until late in the back stretch and went to the front in the final charge to the wire.

'Big Cat' Hits Million

While Kentucky Derby winner Secretariat was wreathed in roses, two other horses pulled off major victories on opposite coasts in the United States Saturday.

At Inglewood, Calif., the favorite Cougar II won his way into the exclusive equine millionaire's club by taking the $110,250 Century Handicap at Hollywood Park for the second straight year.

And at New York's Aqueduct track, jockey Jacinto Vasquez, who bypassed a Derby mount to ride Summer Guest in the $86,850 Grey Lag Handicap, chalked up an easy victory.

Vasquez could have ridden Angle Light in the Derby but decided on Summer Guest instead.

It was a smart decision. Angle Light, ridden by Canadian John Le Blanc, was 10th in the field of 13 that ran for the roses.

Cougar II, the Big Cat from Chile, ridden by Bill Shoemaker, went the 1¼ miles on grass in 2:13 2-5 to earn $65,250 and boost his total earnings to $1,006,641 to become the 11th thoroughbred in history to win more than $1 million in a racing career.

Susan's Girl set the pace most of the way before Shoemaker, on the final turn, sent Cougar into the lead to win by 3½ lengths with Wing Out second and Life Cycle third. Susan's Girl was fourth.

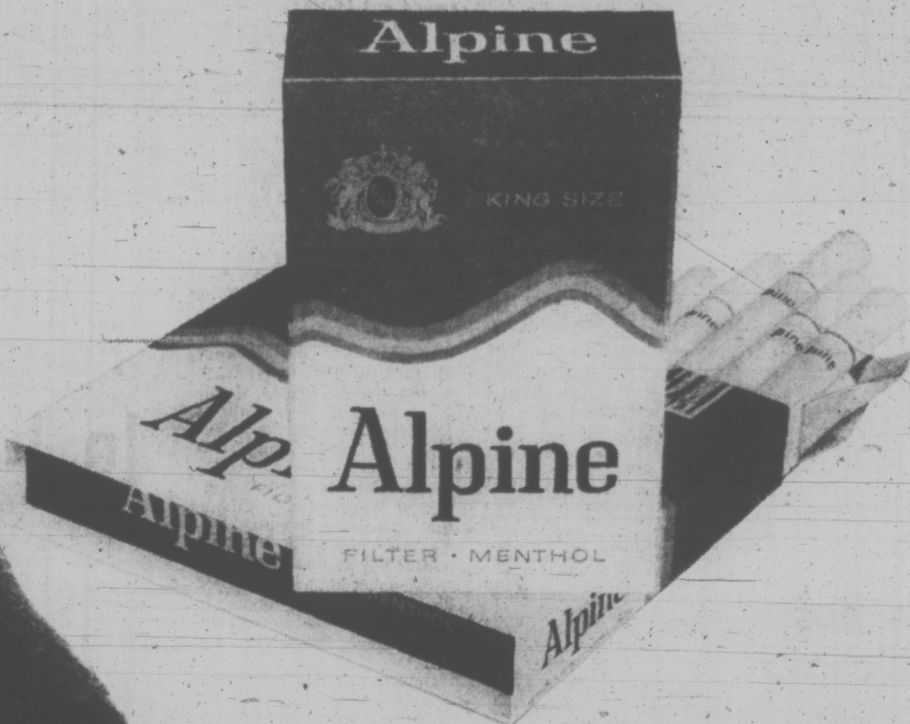

Summer Guest, the only filly in the field of 12 for the Grey Lag race, burst between horses deep in the stretch and also recorded a 3½-length victory.

Loud, another late rusher in the 1¼-mile event, gained the place position by a head over Traffic Cop.

CRICKET CHAMPIONS ALL OUT FOR 16 RUNS

Accurate bowling on a tricky wicket Sunday enabled Incoogs to hustle Cowichan out for one of the lowest totals on record in the Victoria and District Cricket Association.

Jim Wenman took five wickets for only three runs and Ian Mugeridge got the other five wickets at a cost of only eight runs as Incoogs dismissed Cowichan, defending league champions, for a total of 16 runs.

Earlier, Geoff Rooper had scored 21 runs and Mike Walsh had made 13 as Incoogs reach 82 runs to win the match at St. Michael's University School by 66 runs.

Castaways defeated Oak Bay by one wicket at Beacon Hill Park in Sunday's other match and on Saturday, Albion easily defeated Alcos.

Mark Hills took three wickets for five runs, captain Dave Auld got three for 18 and Dave Phillip took two for 17 as Oak Bay was all out for 77 runs, despite a 40 not out by Mike Cochran.

Then, Dave Shaw scored 21 runs to help Castaways reach 78 runs for the loss of nine wickets. Bowling for Oak Bay, Ken Aziz took four for 25 and Kortwright Richards got two for 30.

At Beacon Hill Park Saturday, Keith Dixon hit 49 runs to help Albion declare at 130 for six and then Don Hughes took four wickets for nine runs and Alec Porter got five for 30 as Alcos were all out for only 45.

Haslam Edges O'Dell For Second Triumph

Roy Haslam beat Rick O'Dell to the checkered flag by a car length Saturday night at Western Speedway to win the 35-lap super-stock main event after an exciting, three-way battle for the lead before approximately 3,000 fans.

Haslam, driving a red, white and blue 1967 Chevelle, has now won two of the four main events this season and leads the driver standings. Terry Forsyth, runner-up in standings, also has won two mains.

Forsyth took over the lead on the fourth lap and led the field until he was passed by both Haslam and O'Dell on the 25th circuit. He managed to hang on and finish third.

Larry Pollard celebrated his 19th birthday by winning

Fists Fly, Reiser Falls In Wild Cub-Giant Game

By The Associated Press
Pete Reiser used to crash into walls as a player and now he's crashing into people as a coach.

Reiser, famous for getting knocked unconscious while chasing fly balls for the old Brooklyn Dodgers, was one of the casualties Sunday in a fight-filled National League baseball game between San Francisco Giants and Chicago Cubs.

When it was over, the Giants had an 11-9 victory over Bobby Bonds' two-run homer in the wild, 12-inning first game of a doubleheader, and Reiser had a bad headache.

The Giants won the second game 4-3 after Reiser was carried from the field on a stretcher. He was hit on the head during a fourth-inning brawl in the opener.

He wasn't the only one the Cubs lost, however. Third baseman Ron Santo was earlier struck by a pitch and had to make a fast departure for hospital X-rays.

FOUR THROWN OUT

In addition, Chicago played the first game after the fourth inning without manager Whitey Lockman, coach Hank Aguirre and pitcher Milt Pappas. They were ejected along with Giant pitcher Jim Barr, who also had to be taken to the hospital for precautionary X-Rays.

All X-rays eventually proved negative.

In the National League's other games, Atlanta Braves beat Philadelphia Phillies 3-1, Houston Astros defeated New York Mets 14-8, Cincinnati Reds turned back Montreal Expos 6-1, San Diego Padres beat Pittsburgh Pirates 8-0 and Los Angeles Dodgers blanked St. Louis Cardinals 3-0.

In the American, Detroit ace Mickey Lolich continued to find the going rough as Texas Rangers dealt the Tigers and Lolich a 7-2 setback. Lolich, who won 47 games in the past two seasons, now has a 1-4, won-lost record.

Elsewhere in the American, Chicago White Sox mauled New York Yankees 11-2; Oakland Athletics beat Cleveland Indians twice, 12-0 and 7-3; Baltimore Orioles blanked California Angels 5-0; Milwaukee Brewers ended Kansas City Royals 3-2, and Minnesota Twins defeated Boston Red Sox 10-3.

Two flareups punctuated the 30-minute fourth inning of the Giant-Cub first-game slugfest. Both arguments occurred with Barr at the plate.

In apparent retaliation of Barr hitting Santo with a pitch in the third inning, Chicago starter Pappas fired a ball behind Barr's head in the fourth. Both benches emptied and the players argued, everyone forgot about Dave Rader on first base. Since no timeout was called, he came home with a Giant run, untouched.

Pappas' third pitch hit Barr and touched off the brawl where Reiser was hurt, not to mention several feelings.

"Pete was kicked in the back of the neck after he fell down," said National League president Charles Feeney, who was watching the game.

Reiser appeared to be okay, although he stayed overnight in the hospital as a precautionary measure.

Roger Nelson scattered eight hits and Johnny Bench and Dave Concepcion hit home runs to lead Cincinnati over Montreal.

Crusaders Undeclared

Greg Gudgeon scored three touchdowns to lead Oak Bay Crusaders to a 32-7 victory over Oak Bay Marauders in a Vancouver Island Junior Bantam Football League game Sunday at Bracefoot Park.

Crusaders are unbeaten in four games this season.

In Sunday's other game, Brad Leatham scored three TDs and kicked two conversions to pace Juan de Fuca Tigers to a 28-7 win over Saanich Hornets.

PAY-PAK WINS

ABBOTSFORD — Seattle Pay 'N Pak met tough opposition in the first game but won that and went on to sweep a three-game Northwest International Fastball League series at the weekend here over Abbotsford Merchants.

The Seattle team needed a two-run homer by catcher Butch Batt in the top of the 10th inning to edge the home team 3-1 in Saturday's opener. In the second game, Seattle went on a six-run scoring spree in the first inning and coasted to a 9-0 victory.

On Sunday, busy Dick Christensen pitched a three-hitter and was three-for-three at the plate, blasting a home run, single and double and batting in three runs.

A second game set for Sunday was rained out.

OUR SMALL CAR IS THE BEST REASON FOR BUYING OUR BIG CAR.

THE NEW MARK II. THE MOST TOYOTA.

Small cars are tougher to make than big cars. Getting all the important features into a small car and still keeping it economical is the true test of an automobile maker.

Toyota cars come with more standard features than any other small car. (Which may have something to do with why we're the biggest selling small car in the world.)

And now we can offer the world the first big car to be built the way a big car should be built: like a small car. With features designed in, not just tacked on.

And the end result is a big car that has more standard features than any other car in its class: the new Mark II.

Power steering is standard.

A six-cylinder 140-hp overhead cam engine is standard. Power front disc brakes are standard. Even an AM/FM radio is standard.

And the list doesn't stop there. Inside and out, you'll find things on the new Mark II you'd expect to pay for elsewhere. An electric clock, for instance. Wall-to-wall carpeting. A rear window defroster. Double stripe white wall tires. And fully reclining bucket seats.

In fact, since the new Mark II has the most room, the most comfort, and the most luxury of any Toyota, we're calling it the most Toyota.

You can find out for yourself by taking the Mark II for a test drive. In the Sedan, Hardtop, or Wagon version.

But if you really want to find out what our new Mark II is made of, do this:

BRACELET CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE

There are more than 200 medical conditions not readily apparent which could lead to serious injury or death in time of emergency, says Len Nyquist, president of the Victoria Life Underwriters Association.

A stainless steel bracelet or necklace marked Medic-Alert can make all the difference in a crisis.

Local life underwriters are undertaking an information campaign this month to promote the use of Medic-Alert bracelets and necklaces.

It's estimated one person in five in Canada has some medical problem it's important to know about immediately in time of emergency. Trouble is, of course, the victim may be unconscious.

The Medic-Alert tags carry on one side a warning message of the condition, such as "diabetes," "allergic to penicillin," "wearing contact lenses."

Medic-Alert Foundation maintains a central file and accepts calls for information on members from anywhere in the world on a 24-hour basis.

Members also carry wallet cards with information on their medical condition.

Nyquist said information and membership applications may be obtained from local life insurance agents or from the Canadian Medic-Alert Foundation, 174 St. George St., Toronto.

Wounded Knee Arms Pact Made

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — Negotiators for the United States government and Indian militants are optimistic the 69-day occupation of Wounded Knee will end this week now that a disarmament agreement has been signed.

But spokesmen for the two sides traded warnings about future takeovers and the way the government would react.

Negotiators announced Sunday the signing of a disarmament pact that calls for weapons to be surrendered and non-residents to leave the village at 9 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

That is to be followed by implementation of an April 5 agreement that calls for an investigation of civil rights complaints and an audit of Oglala Sioux tribal funds on the Pine Ridge Reservation.

A.I.M., lawyer Ramon Roubideaux, a Sioux, said in a statement: "I think the government should realize that the type of governments on reservations is a failure. Something must be done to replace it."

"If not, there will be more Wounded Knees. These oppressed people are not going to live under these repressive governments."

A.I.M. has contended that traditional chiefs and headmen, not the elected officials, should rule reservations.

Richard Hellstern, deputy assistant U.S. attorney-general in charge of negotiations for the government, said the government has "learned many things" during the 10-week siege.

"I don't think the pattern of patience, negotiation and renegotiation necessarily would be the same if there were another Wounded Knee," he said.

Rites Set For Retired Brigadier

Funeral services will be held at McCall's Chapel Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. for Brig. James Curry Jefferson, 67, distinguished Second World War leader of the Loyal Edmonton Regiment, who died Friday in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

A resident of Oak Bay since 1966, Jefferson was born in England, and arrived in Edmonton with his parents in 1912. In 1942 he assumed command of the Loyal Edmonton Regiment and led them in battle on the beaches of Sicily.

He won his first DSO in the battle of Leonforte, Sicily, and later added a bar to his medal for his leadership in the battle for Ortona.

Jefferson later was promoted to brigadier and commanded the 10th Canadian Infantry Brigade in Normandy. He was subsequently awarded the Croix de Guerre avec Palm by the French government and later the CBE.

Family Saving Pure Canadiana

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sorensen have appointed themselves a historical society of two — determined to save one of Saanich's most historic landmarks.

It's the Oldfield mansion, built in 1906 when Winnipeg realtor J. H. Oldfield came west and bought himself 550 acres in the lush valley that overlooks the road named for his family.

Oldfield was one of the partners in the company that back in 1908 bought the Uplands site and made the initial plans that led to Oak Bay's posh residential district.

One of the wealthiest men to enter the Uplands gates never lived there.

He was Henry Kaiser, the American shipbuilder, aluminum industrialist and car manufacturer.

When he was in the Uplands Kaiser worked as a laborer, building the original roads.

The man who helped plan so long ago what today is still one of the most preferred residential areas in North America spared no effort when it came to planning his own home.

But when the Sorensens, who came from Nanaimo, first set eyes on it in 1971 it had fallen into sorry shape. "The roof was leaking like a sieve, you'd get drowned out if you passed under one area when it was raining," Sorensen recalls.

"Birds and wasps were nesting all around the roof.

We knew we were foolhardy to take on such a job but this house is pure Canadiana. It has a style of its own. It's not pseudo Tudor or anything else, it's part of B.C.'s history. We felt we just had to save the house."

Since 1971 the Sorensens have concentrated on making the house safe and watertight from the outside and hacking away the overgrowth, ivy and weeds that hid the beauty of the 8½ acres remaining in the estate. They've also uncovered two small lakes that two years ago were almost obliterated by felled trees and other debris.

Even inside the house, yet to be tackled by the Sorensens, traces of former elegance are unmistakable.

When Oldfield arrived in Saanich he hired a crew of Chinese to clear his land and two carpenters to build his family home.

"The carpenters were paid two bits a day and it took them two years to finish it," Sorensen reports.

Their workmanship is there to speak of, another world today, wooden pegs, not nails, highlighting the panelling.

In the basement of solid stone mighty tree trunks hold up the beams, solid as the day they were placed there.

Also there is a huge solid water tank capable of holding thousands of gallons of rainwater.

There are leaded windows everywhere, some of them bright with colored designs. Huge cavernous fireplaces that once gorged 36 cords of wood a year are ornately tiled.

Now the house is heated by electricity — when the Sorensens can fit it into the family budget.

"A previous owner had the whole system put into electricity," Sorensen explains, "paying $7,000 for a 700-amp circuit, seven times the amount needed for a normal home!"

Their love affair with the house being such a costly one, the Sorensens make their headquarters in only parts of the house when winter hits making quick "four-minute flat dashes" from room to room when necessary.

Standing in the huge entrance hall, Sorensen said the temperature there reached 28 on more than one occasion.

Now that the outside of the mansion is resuming its long-lost elegance the Sorensens often get callers who spot it from down in the valley. Some of them are interested in buying the old mansion to turn into a restaurant or some other commercial venture.

But the Sorensens stand pat.

Sorensen admits that the huge house is not the most practical of residences for a couple with grown children.

"But," he says, "I don't like to see it exploited and we're hoping we'll be able to find a use for the old home that will preserve it."

He adds, "I've always been a little bit of a nut about history. I guess that's why we tackled this job in the first place."

Just What You Wanted In a Thousand Pieces

It shows my age, I guess, but I remember when you saw something in a store and bought it and had it sent out to your house it arrived at your house just the way it was in the store. Do you remember that, Gramps?

I mean you'd see — say — a storage closet and you'd buy it and presently a large truck would appear with three men in it, a very large, muscular young man and two tiny, ancient men, and the two tiny, ancient men, directed by the shouts of the large, muscular young man, would stagger in with the closet and put it just where you wanted it and that would be the end of it.

This does not happen any more. Almost everything you see in a store these days has been put together to show you how it ought to look, but when it arrives at your house the chances are that it will be neatly boxed and broken down into anything up to a thousand components.

Somewhere inside this crate will be several pages of agey type, headed "Assembly Instructions" or "Installation Procedures," along with little plastic bags containing a tangle of nuts, bolts, screws and other assorted hardware, instantly inducing panic and deep loneliness.

I've a friend who, emboldened by the sudden affluence of a tax refund, recently bought a bicycle and a lawn-mower, both British-made, and a magnificent, canopied lawn swing, made in Japan.

These articles looked perfectly swell in the store, but arrived in the usual neat crates with the usual neat, incomprehensible instructions for putting them together.

Being more than ordinarily inept, my friend soon had the parts for all three items mixed together, had created the world's first lawn swing with handle-bars and was just generally in a state of complete collapse.

I have seen the instructions provided by the Japanese manufacturer of the lawn swing. They are a collector's item, perhaps the finest example extant of impeccable English that makes absolutely no sense whatever. My friend had got no further than the opening words: "Enter tubular cross-bar A through reverse canvass opening" before he threw up his hands and ran, sobbing, to his bedroom.

His conviction, that the Japanese are conspiring to conquer the world by creating mass hysteria, may not be far out.

The only trouble with this theory is the fact that all manufacturers seem equally intent in spreading havoc and may, indeed, employ the same team of instruction-writers, united in their complete contempt for we, the new breed of do-it-yourselfers.

Only last week the instruction writers for Spacemaker Products Ltd., of Mississauga, Ont., and Acmetrack Ltd., of Rexdale, Ont. mused in on my own well-ordered life and had me keening with frustration.

In the store, itself, the Spacemaker, a six-shelf metal cupboard and the lowered door made by Acmetrack metal all made up in working order. "Just the thing for that little alcove," my wife said of the shelves. "Just the thing for hiding the shelves," she said of the lowered door. So I wrote out the cheque, thinking how simple life had become.

They arrived together in neat, flat, cardboard boxes pre-packaged in Rexdale and Mississauga.

The "Installation Procedure" for the lowered door began: "Drill all holes seven-sixteenths dia. x one-and-one-half min. deep. Locate pivot holes (holes nearest jambs) one-and-one-quarter inch from edge of door. See Step No. 3 (B). Locate Guide Wheel holes seven-eighths inch from edge of door."

The "Assembly Instructions" for the shelves began: "Turn all shelf pans upside down and press and click shelf clips. Join two post sections together with a splice bar and quarter-inch long bolts and nuts. IMPORTANT: Open centre hole on splice bar MUST be No. 22 from bottom of post assemblies."

An all-consuming lassitude had suddenly come upon me, the inner defensive mechanism that protects me from a world gone mad, and I lay there with the shades drawn in my locked bedroom remembering the days when you saw something in the store and bought it and had it sent out to your house and it arrived at your house just the way it was in the store. You do remember that, don't you, Gramps?

Month-End Start Up For Ferry

Starting date for the Canadian Pacific freight ferry from Swartz Bay to Vancouver has been set for the end of May, the company said today.

Earlier the company had hoped to have the inaugural run of the Carrier Princess on May 15.

The ferry will go from Swartz Bay to downtown Vancouver in three hours and is designed mainly as a truck carrier. However, passenger cars will be accommodated on a reserve basis. Some foot passengers will also be carried.

The Carrier Princess will have a passenger lounge and a light snack bar. Charge will be $5 for cars, $3 per person.

Sailing times from Swartz Bay are 6 a.m., 1 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., while departure times from Vancouver are 9:30 a.m., 5 p.m. and 1:30 a.m.

The Vancouver — landing dock is about halfway between the Bayshore Inn and the CPR train station on Burrard Inlet.

Hefty Increase in Taxes Face Oak Bay Residents

Oak Bay council will bring down its budget tonight and residents face a hefty increase in taxes unless substantial cuts are made.

After two budget-paring sessions the general and debt-rate still stands at 46.50, 4.4 mills more than in 1972.

Add to this a school tax upped from 31.14 mills to 32.71, a hospital mill rate of

.68 (compared to 1972's .41) and .015 for the municipal financial authority, the mill rate now stands at 79.905, compared to last year's 73.665.

For the owner of a typical house in south Oak Bay, valued on the market in the $33,000 bracket, this means an increase of around $69.

Residents living in the upper Lansdowne area with houses priced in the $45,000 bracket can anticipate increases of about $82.

In the Uplands area, owners of homes with a market value of $66,000 approximately will have a further $125 tacked on their taxes if the budget remains as it stands now.

Tonight's session gets under way at 7:30.

And Parker, she said, found her suggestion for a complementary arrangement between B.C. Hydro transit buses and Pacific Commuter (privately operated) a strange one.

Three other community groups and Saanich council all want improved Hydro bus service in the municipality.

Mrs. Clay said there is no frequent Hydro transit service north of Judah and Glanford, about one mile south of Royal Oak shopping community.

She said Parker pointed out that Royal Oak lies in a private operator's territory where higher fares are permitted.

(Pacific Commuter's existing schedule for Saanich Peninsula service provides for five north-south trips a day through Royal Oak.)

Expanding population, the needs of older people without private transportation and the lack of cheap, convenient transport for students and children justify improved service in the district, Mrs. Clay said.

She supports a request by Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association for east-west bus service in Saanich, which could involve McKenzie or Royal Oak avenues.

The council also favors better routing of Hydro buses for east-west access.

Most Insurance Firms Still Selling Policies

Only one out of 12 auto insurance agencies surveyed by the Times has stopped writing automobile insurance as the March, 1974, deadline for compulsory government insurance draws closer.

The survey was prompted by remarks made by A. E. Warrick, chairman of the British Columbia Advisory Council of the Insurance Bureau of Canada, last week.

Thousands of motorists in the province are being forced to look for new companies to carry their insurance, he said, as companies go out of business, stop writing auto insurance or refuse to take high risk drivers.

"How stupid a remark," said John Oster of John Oster Insurance Agencies.

"If he is not writing it he shouldn't be in the business," Oster said, referring to automobile insurance agents.

"I have turned nobody away from my office," he added.

R. Douglas Agencies was the only firm contacted that was not seeing any new auto insurance.

"We have been (selling auto insurance) up until a week ago," and "We're renewing what we have," said Ron Douglas.

GET TOUGHER

Most insurance firms say things are going to get tougher as the deadline for government insurance approaches and there is less profit in writing a policy for only a few months.

A few insurance underwriting firms have already pulled out of the auto insurance business which makes it tougher for an agent to place a policy.

"The market is definitely going to get tougher as the deadline draws nearer," said Bob Cumberbirch of Cumberbirch Insurance Agencies.

Arsonist Forces Shutdown

Two weekend fires, which have forced Victoria Paving Co. Ltd. to temporarily stop production, are believed to be the work of an arsonist, Victoria Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said today.

Firemen were called to extinguish a piece of canvas burning on top of a 9,000-gallon liquid asphalt tank at the company's Bridge Street plant shortly after 3 a.m. Sunday.

Firemen were called again at 6:21 p.m. to extinguish a fire burning under the same tank.

"It's awfully hard to get asphalt to burn," said Victoria Paving manager E. L. "Tut" Jones. "It's almost impossible."

Jones estimated damage at $6,000, but added insurance investigators are inspecting the plant today.

Spring is the peak season for Victoria Paving and the company was producing a volume of $7,000 to $8,000 a day, said Jones.

Course Eyed On Environment

A proposal for an experimental environmental studies program will be considered by University of Victoria senate at its monthly meeting Wednesday.

The program, outlined in the report of a senate ad hoc committee, already has the approval of the faculty of arts and science.

"An environmental studies program offers the University of Victoria an exciting opportunity to become increasingly responsive to the community's needs, and to further advance its academic reputation," says the ad hoc committee.

The committee, set up a year ago by the senate, is chaired by Dr. Derrick Sewell, professor of geography.

The committee proposes a three-pronged program:

—A program for increasing environmental awareness, possibly third and four-year credit courses plus a continuing education course for optional credit. This could be initiated at relatively little cost, says the committee.

—A specialist training course in environmental studies.

—An environmental studies institute to do research in the field.

An early start could be made on the program, says the committee's report, because UVic already has faculty experienced in this area.

"A number of agencies have already indicated their willingness to furnish financial support provided that the university also made a clear commitment to the program," it says.

Suburbs Push for Better Bus Service

Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association is the latest Saanich community group to ask for better bus service in the suburbs.

But secretary Mrs. John Parker, who wrote B.C. Transit Bureau pointing out deficiencies in existing public transportation in the Northridge-Royal Oak area, is puzzled and annoyed by the response.

She said she was told by bureau director Victor Parker, "If we're willing to pay more taxes we'll get better bus service, which is kind of a slap in the face because in Saanich we already pay high taxes."

And Parker, she said, found her suggestion for a complementary arrangement between B.C. Hydro transit buses and Pacific Commuter (privately operated) a strange one.

Three other community groups and Saanich council all want improved Hydro bus service in the municipality.

Mrs. Clay said there is no frequent Hydro transit service north of Judah and Glanford, about one mile south of Royal Oak shopping community.

She said Parker pointed out that Royal Oak lies in a private operator's territory where higher fares are permitted.

(Pacific Commuter's existing schedule for Saanich Peninsula service provides for five north-south trips a day through Royal Oak.)

Expanding population, the needs of older people without private transportation and the lack of cheap, convenient transport for students and children justify improved service in the district, Mrs. Clay said.

She supports a request by Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association for east-west bus service in Saanich, which could involve McKenzie or Royal Oak avenues.

The council also favors better routing of Hydro buses for east-west access.

"New schools are going in, more houses are being built in the Glanford area... many, many new houses are in Northridge," Mrs. Clay said.

"Many university students have a difficult time," Mrs. Clay said. For those north of Judah there is no transit and for others in that area connections must be made downtown.

For Northridge residents the existing system requires a quarter-mile walk to regular Carey and Wilkinson buses, and for off-peak times a longer walk — about a mile.

Since Hydro is supported by 100 per cent of the people through their taxes, it should provide service to everyone, Mrs. Clay believes. As it is, only 10 per cent can enjoy transit services.

Northridge Community Association is asking for improved service on its own besides the Royal Oak Ratepayers' request. Other recent suggestions for better transit have been made by the Victoria branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada, seeking improvement in outlying areas; residents of Mount Douglas Court development on Arrow, petitioning the council for additional service; and individuals writing to council.

Recycling Pickup Long Way Off

By THE ENVIRONMENTAL CENTRE
Of Greater Victoria

When trash pickup for recycling comes to Victoria, it necessarily will involve municipal governments. The present recycling depot, which is operated by volunteers and four Capital Regional District employees, simply cannot meet additional demands — such as those for door-to-door service.

QUESTION: There are a lot of us living in high-rises who would like to recycle and who have no transportation to the depot. Could you not meet with our managers and arrange a weekly pick-up? We separate glass, newspaper and garbage already, so it would be an easy matter to pick things up. In a small apartment, we have no room to store these things, so it all goes down the garbage chute daily. Such a waste! — Mrs. A.G., Simcoe Street.

ANSWER: The recycle depot, as it is now operated, is not able to pick up trash even in large apartment buildings. Such pick-up, of course, would constitute a duplication of existing private and municipal collection services.

You're right about the waste and we see no reason why trash can't be picked up for recycling. We advise you and all other persons interested in recycling pick-up service to write your mayors and municipal councils and tell them so. They have the power to order pick-ups for recycling as well as to require householders to separate trash.

Pick-up of newspapers probably will come first. As you may know, Oak Bay already experimented with picking up newspapers, but the results of the test were inconclusive. Waste newspapers are a bulky part of our solid wastes, and only a fraction of the waste newspapers in the Victoria area is being recycled. Victoria Press uses about 25 tons of newsprint daily publishing the Times and Colonist. Each month, recycling operations handle around 50 tons — only the equivalent of about two days' publication.

After you've written city council, there might be some other action you could take — right in your own building. Perhaps your manager could provide a corner of your building's laundry room or storage area for collection of trash to be recycled provided some tenants would agree to take turns carrying the materials to the Borden Street depot. We know this system is in successful operation in some apartment blocks.

Tin cans that have been washed out, stripped of their labels and flattened, take up little space. A lot of waste paper can be compressed into a small box — just remember to keep any bits of plastic, aluminum, carbon paper or waxed cardboard or paper out of it. Bottles which aren't reusable can be crushed to take up less space. Some persons use buckets such as discarded five-gallon paint cans for crushed glass — one bucket for clear and one bucket for green glass. Newspapers — even when stacked and bundled neatly — are about the bulkiest item to save for recycling. We wish you luck in organizing a recycling project in your apartment building. It seems to us that with a little co-operation between local government and apartment building operators, large apartment blocks should be the easiest places for successful recycling projects to operate. Installation of five separate garbage chutes, for example, would make trash separation for recycling almost automatic.

QUESTION: My largest potted plant is plagued with some sort of a problem. Several of the leaves have developed brown tips and margins. I feed the plant regularly and it appears otherwise healthy, but I notice that there is some mould or moss growing on the surface of the soil in the pot. I wonder if this is an indication of some sort of a disease that is showing up in the leaves and if you can suggest some safe means of getting the plant back to health. — F.D.

ANSWER: Don't worry about mould or moss on the soil. Give your plant a bath or shower.

Some time ago we advised a bath in warm, mildly soapy water for houseplants bothered with aphids or other such sucking insects. We've found that a bath — or shower — also is the answer for plants that have leaves with brown tips or margins.

The brown is caused by excessive amounts of salts in the leaves — from the fertilizer you apply to make your plant big and healthy. A rinse of water will carry away many of the excess salts and your plant should perk up. If it is too large to carry into sink, bathtub or out of doors, try spreading some newspapers around the pot and sprinkle the leaves or spray them with one of the sprayers that is designed for just such a purpose. In nature, rain washes away excess salts in the leaves.

Jackie Jet Becomes More Down to Earth

PARIS (Reuter) — In her younger days, she crashed gracefully through the sound barrier and became the world's fastest woman flier. The only woman test pilot in France, they called her "Jackie Jet."

Today at 55, Jacqueline Auriol is the French aircraft industry's super-saleswoman. Now she smashes through the world's market in aggressive export drives — gracefully too.

At present she is busy helping in the organization of the giant Paris International Air Show, opening at La Bourget in May. The show is the world's biggest shop-window for sophisticated weaponry and aircraft from 18 countries, including the United States and the Soviet Union.

for her duel in the skies with American Jacqueline Cochran — a 15-year fight that ended with Jackie Jet capturing the world speed title in a delta-winged Mirage 111 fighter in June, 1963.

The petite, auburn-haired French test pilot has since scurried round the world on numerous missions, the success of which has helped to make France the world's No. 3 arms exporter.

Jackie Auriol's well-sculpted nose is American, skillfully constructed piece by piece in New York — largely from the bone bank of Manhattan Hospital, after a terrible air crash into the Seine River in 1949.

But her warm smile is still French, like everything else about Jackie.

Most of her former beauty she left on operating tables during 32 separate plastic surgery operations which dragged on for three years. Her grace today comes from a quiet dedication, an intensity and a devotion to flying and her family.

At the age of 30, Jacqueline Auriol was a qualified test pilot and also the daughter-in-law of France's first post-war president.

She gave up a dazzling social life to concentrate on flying after she learned to fly for fun in 1947.

Up to a few years ago, at the Centre Dessais en Vol flight test centre in Bretigny, near Paris, she was the only woman test pilot and on the field she is known simply as Auriol.

Her fellow-workers see nothing incongruous in "Auriol," dressed in greasy white overalls, repairing a defective undercarriage. Nor does she.

One-Dish Morning Starter Offered by Clever Swiss

By HILDA BEASTALL

A pleasant one-dish breakfast is called a Swiss Omelet — probably because the Swiss have been known for high nutrition packed into small bulk. This same omelet makes a healthy lunch for any person — school children, busy homemakers, active older people — with quantities of ingredients adjustable to meet number of servings.

SWISS OMELET

(2 large servings)
½ cup milk plus 3 tablespoons skim milk powder
¼ cup wheat germ
2 large or 4 small eggs (separated)
1 tablespoon margarine
2 tablespoons cheddar type cheese, grated
2 tablespoons diced crisp bacon
Four milk with the powder

dered skim added, over the wheat germ and set aside. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry. Beat yolks until thick (with a little salt if used), combine with wheat germ and milk mixture. Then fold in beaten whites gently.

Melt margarine in shallow glass dish. Pour in the egg mixture and bake uncovered at 325 degrees for 15 minutes, or until set.

Sprinkle with cheese and bacon. Return to oven to melt cheese. Fold in half, and divide in two if amount for 2 people.

To cut down on time for preparation, you can have crisp bacon pieces ready from a previous day. Keep in a covered glass jar in refrigerator. Or omit bacon with this recipe if not desired. You will then need a few grains of salt.

Another variation which takes less time and does not require oven heat, is to use a covered frypan on very gentle heat. Melt the margarine in the pan. Pour in the egg mixture, cover, and cook with gentle heat until the mixture sets. High heat will toughen the omelet, making it both unpleasant to eat and indigestible.

Cut the omelet into four sections; turn each section with a spatula, sprinkle with cheese; replace cover for two or three minutes until the cheese melts — again using gentle heat.

Serve on warm plates at once. A sprinkling of chopped parsley or chopped chives on top adds color and a little more nutrition.

Enjoying a satisfying breakfast is more than an old-fashioned idea, it is what takes labor and management through a long morning of exacting work without a coffee break.

If you think that over, you will recall a few that you know who still do not snack between meals, though they may take a break to relax muscles or to exercise them.

A working day calls for three square meals daily. Each person has an idea of what constitutes a square meal. Remember that a square meal has four equal sides, but they may be of any lengths, though all equal to each other. Perhaps this geometrical fact is a guide to choice of food.

Undernutrition is frequently at the root of a feeling of tension, fatigue, or depression says Dr. Hilde Bruch, psychoanalyst, in her new book Eating Disorders. The idea is not new.

dear abby

Clothes Don't Make Man When They Belong to Her

you give him one at home, or he tries to masquerade in public where it is against the law.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 52 years, but the last year, since my husband's 77th birthday, he has been acting funny. For one thing, he thinks every lady who looks at him is trying to vamp him. (Not only elderly widows, but young married women.)

He also has been giving things away. For instance, I looked high and low for the bottom to my double boiler, and then he told me he gave it away. Also, I made 22 quarts of matzo ball soup and put them in the freezer, and he has already given away 12 quarts.

He gives things to neighbors, friends, and strangers when I am out playing cards. Now I look my jewelry when I leave the house. I don't know what he is going to give away next.

I can't divorce him because I think he is sick. Don't send me a personal reply because he sometimes throws away all the mail without even opening it.

I told my son (he is a lawyer) about his father's actions, and he said, "It's his age, Ma. You'll have to watch him."

Must I stay home 24 hours a day and watch him? I'm a nervous wreck wondering what he will do next. — His Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Your husband is obviously not well. Yes, either you or someone else must watch him 24 hours a day; it's clear that he should not be left alone.

DEAR ABBY: A couple, merely acquaintances of a few years, have dropped in to see us on three different occasions. They appear to be like other people, except for the husband.

He asks to take a bath the minute they step inside the door. The first time we thought nothing of it because they were on their way home from a day's trip in their car, even though their home is only five miles from ours.

My wife and I have never been in their home but we understand it has all the conveniences of ours, including a tub and shower.

On two other occasions when they had come directly from their home, he again asked to take a bath. After the third bath I concluded that he must be some kind of a nut. Needless to say we have never returned their visits and probably never will.

What do you suppose makes our ordinary bathing facilities so fascinating that the husband cannot wait to use his own? — Perplexed.

DEAR PERPLEXED: I don't know, but I surely would have asked him after the second bath.

Many Canadians are afraid of pesticides in their food. Is their concern justified?

You can learn the answer to this question from the 4-page Dispatch From The Kitchen To The Pesticide Lab. This leaflet tells you that Canada's Health Protection Branch studies the presence of pesticides in the foods we eat "as purchased" and "as consumed."

(washed, trimmed and cooked).

In a total diet study, the average daily per capita consumption of 84 individual foods has been examined. The results show that pesticide residues in our food supplies do not constitute a hazard to our health.

This reassuring verdict is based on the acceptable daily intake (A.D.I.) (Appropriate "quotidian" admissible AQA) for specific pesticides, which has been worked out by the World Health Organization. This A.D.I. can be safely consumed by a human every day of his life. According to the diet study, our intake of the four main pesticides ranges from less than 1 per cent to 51 per cent of the A.D.I. This means that the pesticides that are used to increase Canadian food production do not endanger your health.

'Let Babies Die'

LONDON (AP) — Doctors should allow some severely handicapped babies to die so that money spent keeping them alive can be spent on other medical problems, a British physician said recently.

Dr. Eliot Slater, retired director of Britain's Medical Research Council, wrote in the British Medical Journal that keeping a seriously abnormal newborn child alive means suffering for the baby and a lifetime of agony for the family.

Slater said the most advanced medical services have been deployed to preserve such life.

Canadian Women's Council Resentful of Lib Publicity

SASKATOON (CP) — Apart from such radical topics as abortion on demand, the concerns of the women's liberation movement are the same that have occupied the National Council of Women for years, says Helen Hnatyshyn, council president.

The difference is that the former is doing its work with publicity while the latter is doing it without, Mrs. Hnatyshyn added.

"Maybe I shouldn't say this, but I think perhaps there is a little resentment towards women's lib. All the concerns which women's lib has are things we have been working on for years."

"Women's lib has received a great deal of publicity. We haven't."

"We don't seek publicity. We don't do anything to attract attention to ourselves. But we're in their pitching."

Mrs. Hnatyshyn, widow of

Mrs. Hnatyshyn

Senator John Hnatyshyn of Saskatoon, said the council is not against the movement.

"We applaud them because they have brought to public attention many important matters."

"If we're opposed to anything, it's their publicity-hungry attack on things."

The council uses a more subdued approach to bring its concerns to the fore.

"The status of women is our big thing now," said Mrs. Hnatyshyn noting that it formed the substance of much of the council's latest presentation to the government Feb. 26. It advocated such things as establishing more day care centres and the right of women to higher education.

"We also represent a lot of housewives — You know, women in the home. We're concerned that they're not in the Canada Pension Plan. We're very concerned about this."

Mrs. Hnatyshyn said it is difficult to estimate the council's over-all membership.

family

There are local and provincial councils, federated with the national council, plus 20 national organizations and societies such as Girl Guides, Anglican Church Women and the Jewish Council of Women, which are also federated with the National Council of Women.

"Our membership depends on how their memberships fluctuate. We claim that we have at least 750,000 women represented by the council."

members isn't necessarily higher than it was a decade ago.

"I think it's a misconstrued opinion that the council is full of older women. I first came into the council when I was in my 20s."

"Since the appearance of the status of women commission report, many younger women have taken women's organizations very seriously."

Of course, when you get to the level of the national council, members are older."

Mrs. Hnatyshyn said the aim of the council originally was to ensure "the welfare of the family and society in general," and this hasn't really changed.

"The problems we deal with may have changed, but I don't think the aims have."

The council tries to attract young members, she said.

"We're forever urging them at the local level to bring in knowledgeable young women to head committees."

At present, the council was reviewing its structure and goals with a view to establishing a more efficient organization.

The council, as it is, had an awkward structure.

"We will go down the line, trying to find means of shortening the lines of communication among the numerous organizations and sub-councils, so we can speak more quickly on any topic."

"Communication is very important today."

Despite some financial strains — "our income is fairly static but costs have gone up" — there was no sign that the council would disband.

"We have a very dedicated group of women," said Mrs. Hnatyshyn. "And I don't think there's any lack of community problems. There will always be something to be concerned about."

"I think there will always be room for the National Council of Women."

Status Report a Must

It is my opinion that men and women involved in the new commission set up to study all aspects of education in the province, should be given a copy of the report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Canada.

Also that the chapter on education in that report be named as prescribed reading for them.

It has been said many times that one method of achieving the goal of equality for women is through education.

However, at this moment, formal education enables men to choose from a wide variety of life styles but women going through a similar educational process are denied the same opportunities.

At the same time (and as the royal commission report points out) education is considered to be everyone's right.

Elementary and secondary schooling is compulsory for both girls and boys and the public-supported schools are open to all children without cost.

Beyond the secondary level, federal and provincial governments provide grants and student loans to young people of both sexes.

On the surface it appears that complete equality has been achieved. However, in its chapter on education, the royal commission is not nearly so sanguine.

It points out that the obstacles now in the way of girls and women have nothing to do with declared educational policy.

They are rooted in the continuing assumptions about women, about their capacities, ambitions, and most of all, about their "place."

A study guide prepared and edited by the Canadian Association for Adult Education and based on the royal commission report, gives some disturbing evidence to substantiate the above fact.

It says that, on the whole, girls "do better" in high school than boys. They drop out less frequently on the way to the upper grades. Yet, fewer girls graduate from the highest grades.

Female enrollment at our universities is on the increase. Today, women constitute one-third of the undergraduate population. They obtain at least 20 per cent of the master's degrees and somewhere around eight per cent of the doctorates. About 43 per cent of part-time students are women.

Yet, the great majority of women university students are enrolled in two major fields — arts and education.

Girls are now attending publicly-sponsored post-secondary technical courses in greater numbers and now make up about 20 per cent of the total enrollment.

Yet, at trade schools, jointly sponsored by provincial departments of education and the federal government, sex-typing of occupations is apparent. Women students are mainly registered in such courses as business practice, nursing aide training, power sewing, hairdressing, beauty culture and domestic and waitress training.

As the royal commission report and the study guide present it, there's convincing evidence that girls and women need help to overcome the pressures that often surround them to settle for too little.

The ease with which they can get low-paid industrial and office jobs with relatively little formal training may lead to taking the path of least resistance.

The sex typing of occupations, still so prevalent in our society, encourages the view that some fields of study and work are "unfeminine."

There is also a practical matter. Even with training, it may be difficult to get a job or a promotion in lines of work where men dominate.

Girls and women should be helped to realize that custom has created these divisions of work between men and women.

Such divisions need not be hard and fast. There are wide options open for women who refuse to be satisfied with low occupational expectations.

Education is the key. Yet, too few girls are aware of the implications of their educational choices.

A greater number of good guidance specialists are needed. Guidance materials should take it for granted that all occupations are open to both sexes.

Girls, in particular, require up-to-date occupational information in planning careers.

These are facts those named to task forces and panels throughout the province, under the commission recently set up to study all aspects of education, will be faced with, over and over again.

That's why I believe a copy of the report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Canada, should be given to each one of them. And that the chapter on education in that report definitely be prescribed reading.

Keep Air and Light With Woven Screen

• the leisure craftsman

by Phyllis Fiarotta

I wanted to close a doorway off from traffic but I did not want to cut off the light and air flow with a door.

I do not claim to be a weaver, but I must admit I outdid myself with this project. What I did was construct a giant weaving in the doorway. It is beautifully decorative and solves the problem of air and light flow.

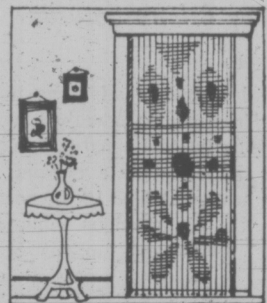

I painted the inside of the doorway a contrasting color from the wall to create a frame for my weaving. Then I hammered 1/4- or 1/2-inch carpet staples along the middle of the sides, top and floor of the doorway opening. (The closer you place the staples the tighter your weaving.) I made my weaving with straw wrapping cord, but yarns, ribbons and lengths of beads and sequins can be used.

Start your weaving base by wrapping the cord from staple to staple along the height of the entire door. Once this framework is completed, you work your design, if any, moving the cord in and out of the base cords. These cross cords are then tied to the side staples. The cross cords are versatile so they need not start at a side staple, but can start amid the base cords. Knot these cords to the base cord from which it started.

A weaving of this sort can be quite simple or it can take a specific form, such as a landscape. This all goes to prove that even a housewife with six kids has room for a bit of creativity.

PANTRY GIFT BOX IDEAS

Gift boxes and trimmings can be very costly when you are a member of a family as large as mine. Between weddings, birthdays, showers, holidays, etc., a gal like me who is on a tight budget can waste money on expensive packaging. I solve the dilemma with packaging salvaged from the pantry.

Coffee cans, oatmeal boxes, and paper towel tubes can "box" small soft items, such as scarves, handkerchiefs and socks.

Blouses, shirts, and lingerie fit into cereal boxes.

Super-size soap boxes are great for larger items. Egg cartons are ideal for multiple small gifts, such as tiny soaps, sachets, etc.

I tape gift wrap, cut to shape, to the surface of the individual boxes. Using newspaper pages as gift wrap is an inexpensive trick that can score a hit. Use a section of the paper that fits the personality of the recipient — the sports pages for the football or baseball fan, fashion news for the teen, the comics for youngsters.

Quick bows can be made by stapling several dollies or layers of circular aluminum foil together at their centres.

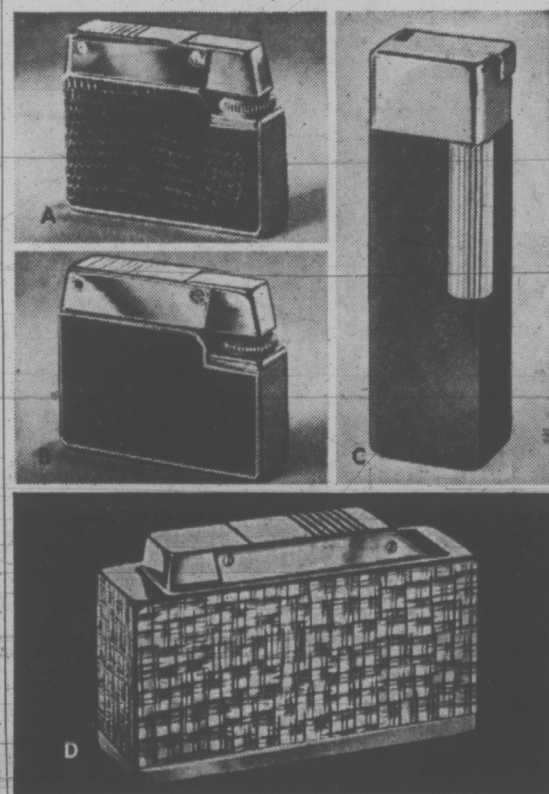

For children, use tape to attach strings of pennies in a crisscross design over the top of the box.

FAMILY GALLERY

What parent isn't flooded with drawings from their offspring? I feel that any artistic expression should be acknowledged, so I've set aside one wall in our playroom for a gallery. I've stretched two lengths of cord across the length of the wall. "Originals" are clipped to the cord with clothespins. In addition to art work, we hang test papers and outstanding compositions and poems. The children, themselves, are encouraged to change the exhibition as new additions come along.

MUSIC HIT THE STREETS Saturday when Canadians challenged American delegates to a piano street race as the grand finale of the Pacific Northwest Society of Coatings Technology conference sponsored by Bapco Paint Ltd., at the Em-

Music's Sir Ernest Dies at 79

TORONTO (CP) — Sir Ernest Campbell MacMillan, 79, the first person to be knighted outside the United Kingdom for contributions to music, died Sunday in a Toronto hospital.

Knighted by George V in 1935, Sir Ernest was known as the statesman of Canadian music.

He was conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra 1931-56, conductor of Toronto

Mendelssohn Choir 1942-57, dean of music at the University of Toronto 1927-52, principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music 1926-42, past president of the Canadian College of Organists, vice-president of the Royal College of Organists and president of the Composers, Authors and Publishers Association of Canada.

Born in Mimico, Ont., Aug. 18, 1893, he was the son of Rev. Alexander MacMillan and Wilhelmina Ross MacMillan. His father, a noted hymnodist, was editor of the Presbyterian Book of Praise and later the United Church Hymnary.

Sir Ernest appeared as concert organist in Toronto's Massey Hall at the age of 10 and three years later became an associate of the Royal College of Organists. In 1910, he graduated from Oxford University as a Bachelor of Music.

He is known for his many arrangements of French-Canadian and Indian folk songs. His works included Sketches for String Quartet and A Song of Deliverance.

Many consider Sir Ernest's greatest artistry was in his distinguished organ playing.

While studying music in Paris in the summer of 1914, Sir Ernest had gone to Bayreuth and having stayed behind with a friend who was ill, was captured by the Germans and interned for four years. It is then that he composed the work and wrote the papers that later comprised his Oxford doctorate.

Under his direction, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra took its place among the major symphonic organizations of North America. Sir Ernest was invited to perform as guest conductor at several top symphonies including Philadelphia, Chicago, Washington, and Los Angeles.

SWEEP BEGINS

VERNON (CP) — A mortar percussion cap, numerous plugs and assorted shrapnel from grenades was found Sunday by a Canadian Forces team sweeping an army range near here.

Major Aubrey Brown, in charge of the 84-man detail, said what was believed to be a grenade range was found Sunday.

The army is sweeping the Second World War training ground in an effort to find unexploded bombs. Two Vernon youngsters were killed last month when a mortar bomb they found and took home exploded.

The sweep is expected to take about seven weeks.

Nelson Civic Workers Vote 95% for Strike

NELSON (CP) — The 60 outside workers and 20 inside workers here voted 95 per cent in favor of strike action against the city of Nelson Saturday night.

The workers are represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

CUPE representative Aubrey Burton said the Nelson workers want the same settlement as was negotiated with six Trail-area municipalities in March. That contract gave workers two 25-cent-an-hour wage increases in an agreement that expires at the end of next February.

Current base rates for workers range from $3.39 to $4.75 an hour. Burton says the union and the city are only two cents an hour apart in wage negotiations, but some fringe benefits are also in dispute.

Mediator Charles Stewart said he will submit his report to Labor Minister William King within the next couple of days. The union will be free to strike once the minister releases the mediation report to the two sides in the dispute.

Land Act 'Weakened'
VERNON (CP) — The head of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society said Sunday that the Land Commission Act will not curb land speculators.

Tom Thompson, executive director of SPEG, told delegates to a weekend seminar of the New Democratic Party's central interior regional council that amendments to the legislation had weakened it considerably.

GOVERNING BODY EYED FOR SCOTS

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government is considering plans to give Scotland its own elected assembly, a first step towards a federal system for the whole of the United Kingdom, political sources said Sunday.

Such an organization would be Prime Minister Heath's answer to strong nationalist calls for some decentralization of power from the British Parliament in London and a response to a recent upsurge in poll support for the Scottish Nationalist Party (SNP).

Heath is expected to speak on the subject at a Scottish Conservative party conference in Perth next Saturday.

Arson Suspected

QUESNEL (CP) — Arson was suspected in a fire which destroyed the municipal workshop here early Sunday. No estimate of total loss was available, but the building and contents were insured.

Federal, Provincial Officials To Study Barrett's Oil Route

VANCOUVER (CP) — Donald Macdonald, federal energy minister, said Sunday federal and provincial officials will conduct a technical study of Premier Barrett's plan to ship Alaska oil by an Arctic railway and British Columbia pipeline.

Premier Barrett and Macdonald held a 90-minute meeting at Vancouver International Airport.

Macdonald said arrangements have been completed "to have an analysis of the proposal from a technical standpoint and representatives of the provincial and federal governments will be getting together in the near future to take a look at this."

He said the federal government will be "having a group coming out within a week or so."

The proposal which Barrett unveiled on a trip to Washington, D.C. in March called for a 1,200-mile railway from Prudhoe Bay to Lower Post.

Oil would be delivered by rail to Lower Post, then shipped south by an underground pipeline along the route of the B.C. Railway.

Gas delivered to Lower Post would be shipped by pipeline to Edmonton.

The Barrett proposal, called "The Way Out," was presented as an alternative to both the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline and west coast tanker route.

Federal Environment Minister Jack Davis and Provincial Resources Minister Bob Williams were also at the meeting.

Davis described the premier's plan as "half-baked."

"We've now opened the door completely," Barrett said.

"We're now allowing our senior officials to get on with the exchange of information and with no barriers in terms of the politics."

Macdonald said the technical discussions will determine if Barrett's proposal "is consistent with the objectives for Canada as a whole."

He said there is no disagreement over trying to avoid shipments of oil down the coast.

"What we're really taking a look at is the best corridor and the best vehicle for having a cross-continent shipment to American markets," he said.

Last week, Barrett criticized the federal government for not stating which oil shipment route it favors and challenged Prime Minister Trudeau to call an election on the issue.

He said Sunday there remains a fundamental disagreement between the federal and provincial governments on how the issue should be handled, but Sunday's meeting "cleared the air on a number of exchanges that we've had."

Barrett said however he regretted Ottawa's decision not to send representatives to current U.S. congressional hearings on the Alaska pipeline.

He also said he is still not satisfied that the federal government has taken a stand on which route it favors.

"They've given me an explanation of their opposition, but I'm not satisfied," he said.

"They're the government, they're entitled to have that position, but I'm not satisfied," he said.

WITNESS SOUGHT

Saanich detectives are today looking for a woman who may have witnessed the Sunday armed robbery of a Cedar Hill grocery store.

A man in his early twenties entered Doncaster Food Market, 3490 Cedar Hill Road at 2:30 p.m. He had his sweater pulled up over his face and was carrying a long knife.

Store owner's wife, Mrs. Mary Thompson, came from the back of the store to serve her customer. The man ordered her at knifepoint to hand over the contents of the till. He then fled on foot with $80 north on Cedar Hill Road.

Detectives said today they would like to speak to a woman who entered the store shortly after the incident, and who may have seen the hold-up man.

No description of the woman is available, but she drove off from the store in a Volkswagen saloon.

The robbery suspect is described as 5 feet, 10 inches, 140 pounds, with a thin face and bluish-brown, medium-length hair.

Soviets Hint Troop-Cut Plan

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
Washington Post

LONDON — The Soviet Union is informally suggesting a new formula to cut back U.S. and Russian troops in central Europe, it has been learned.

The formula calls for a 10 per cent slice in the 190,000 U.S. ground forces in return for a 10 per cent slice in the 650,000 Soviet troops. In addition, the Russians are seeking a non-military sweetener to compensate for the unequal reduction in troop numbers.

One they are talking about would assure Moscow of most-favored nation status in trade, an objective sought by President Nixon but threatened by a suspicious Congress.

The formula has just surfaced here and aroused considerable initial interest among officials engaged in the complex negotiations to achieve "mutual and balanced force reductions."

It cannot be described as a Soviet proposal because it has not yet been advanced, so far as is known, by Soviet officials. But it has been talked about by Soviet representatives who have been known to fly serious kites in the past.

These representatives are predicting, moreover, that Leonid Brezhnev, the Russian Communist Party leader, is likely to "suggest something along these lines when he meets President Nixon in Washington later this spring or summer."

The thorny question of troop cuts in Europe has been bedevilled by what is known as the problem of "symmetry." In simple terms, any Russian troops withdrawn to the Soviet Union will still remain much closer to West Germany than any Seventh Army forces brought back to the United States. Moreover, there are about one million Warsaw Pact ground forces in central Europe against 700,000 NATO and French troops, a further source of imbalance.

But the new formula advanced here is a quiet way of achieving asymmetry without saying so. Equal 10 per cent cuts would mean 19,000 fewer U.S. ground troops for 65,000 fewer Russians. The implicit recognition that this is asymmetrical comes in the Russian suggestion of the trade sweetener.

Sikh Missionary Tours Island

Ishwar Balani, president of the Holy Mission of Guru Nanak in Calcutta, India, is in Victoria this week on his second world-wide mission in four years.

He will conduct services at the Punjabi Akali Sikh temple on Graham each day from 6 to 7:30 a.m. and from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Special classes for children will be held daily from 6 to 7 p.m.

At 10 a.m., Saturday, a service will be held with English translations to help Canadians attending although all services are open to them from now until Sunday.

Balani's present tour of Sikh communities will last from six to eight months, six weeks of this being spent on Vancouver Island.

From Victoria, Balani will go to temples in Paldi, Lake Cowichan and Port Alberni.

His mission in India provides a free hospital, free school and free kitchen for the poor and is administered by volunteer help.

These volunteers are travelling with Balani — Mrs. Lachmi Kirpalani, Mrs. Sushila Hiranandani and Miss Deva Samtani.

Maisie Wins With Metrics

A 14-year-old Victoria girl has been named national winner of a Canadian School Trustees' Association essay contest.

Maisie Mah, of 1015 Balmoral, will receive a total of $150 in prize money for her 6½-page essay on metrics.

She travelled to Vancouver today to accept her award from Education Minister Eileen Dailly at the annual convention of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

A Grade 9 student at Central Junior High School, Maisie won the contest over nearly 2,000 other young writers.

She thinks Canada should change to metrics but it will take time to make the conversion easy.

Maisie, who has lived in Victoria all her life, says math is her best subject in school.

Surgeons Still Boost Skills

I am much pleased to read that the American College of Surgeons is now encouraging surgeons all over the country to make a bigger effort to improve their skills and to keep up-to-date.

When a physician or surgeon has a huge practice, it is hard to find time for the great amount of reading that he would like to do.

A good step forward was taken, years ago, when members of the Academy of General Practice were each year compelled, if they wanted to keep their membership, to attend a certain number of medical lectures. I now read that the doctors of Oregon plan to do a certain amount of studying each year.

I am glad also that a greater effort is being made to have to be surgeons pass a stiff examination before they can call themselves specialists in surgery.

Today there are some 10 recognized surgical specialties in medicine: obstetrics and gynecology, orthopedics (bones), neurosurgery (the nervous system), plastic surgery, ophthalmology (the eyes), otorhinolaryngology (ear, nose and throat), thoracic surgery (the chest), urology (kidneys, bladder, prostate), colon and rectal surgery, and pediatric surgery.

Certification in one of these specialties means that the person must have graduated from medical school, spent a year as a hospital intern, then three to five years as a resident in one of the surgical specialties. The surgical resident starts by handling emergencies in the middle of the night and holding a retractor, the instrument devised to keep the wound open during an operation.

Then he will be asked to clamp off a bleeding blood vessel. Later, he'll sew the wound after the operation. Finally, he will be allowed to do the whole operation.

After his residency, he will have to spend two years in active practice before he will be allowed to go before the specialty board. If he passes, he will be considered board-certified.

Logheed Hits Freight Rate 'Farce'

TORONTO (CP) — New and national industrial policies are urgently needed to take advantage of certain important potentials in Western Canada, Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed said today.

Seeking support for proposed new transportation policies and Alberta's natural-gas pricing position, Lougheed told the Empire and Canadian Clubs of Toronto that because of its resources and geography "Alberta's direction and mood have become significant in the total Canadian picture."

The provinces, he said, should strive — both together and with the federal government — "to reach some basic understandings as to realistic economic goals and objectives and a possible industrial strategy that would increase the probabilities of our progressing towards such goals and objectives."

Lougheed said a belated recognition of the significance of Western Canada in the total Canadian economic picture is gradually emerging.

CHECK LIST

He said Canada should strive for industrial policies in the following areas:

—New transportation approaches to take advantage of regional potential.

—The spreading of job-creating enterprises away from heavily concentrated industrial areas.

—A balance between offsetting regional disparities and building upon new growth centres.

—A climate which encourages worldwide investment but provides incentives for increasing Canadian equity participation.

Lougheed said the Western Economic Opportunities Conference in Calgary in July should seek an entirely new approach to national transportation policies to take advantage of regional potential.

SETBACK

If the conference turns out to be merely talk and does not achieve concrete results, he said, "it will be a significant setback for Canada."

The premier said the realization by Western Canadians of their full potential is obviously of benefit to all Canada.

"A western region charging forth on all cylinders and feeling we are a full participant in the Canadian scene has to be a powerful positive factor for Canada."

Lougheed said a commitment by the federal government to major changes in national transportation policy "would reduce the historic grievance of Western Canada in the nature of confederation."

RECOGNITION

"There is a growing recognition in Central Canada, he said, that further concentration of industry in the Toronto-Hamilton area and upon the shores of the St. Lawrence would not be in the public interest — "that the quality of life will be adversely affected by such further concentration."

Lougheed said the West has probably never been in a better position to capitalize upon new transportation policies in an effective way.

The Progressive Conservative premier said the "ludicrous nature of the existing freight rate structure in Canada is of such a nature to be called a farce."

A product shipped from Ontario to British Columbia and back to Alberta was charged less than if the same product on the same train had been dropped off in Alberta on the way through.

Structural steel was shipped from Hamilton to Vancouver for $1.64 a hundred pounds, while the same steel shipped from Hamilton to Calgary cost $2.46 a hundred pounds.

WHAT'S GOOD?

Lougheed questioned whether a nation of Canada's size and thinly spread population should have freight rates based on so-called competition and suggested that the rates should be established on the basis of what's good for Canada.

Defending Alberta's attempt to obtain higher prices for its natural gas, the premier said the move will be of economic benefit to all of Canada.

The vast majority of the profit portion from the higher prices that would accrue to gas-producing companies would be re-invested in further exploration efforts, not just in Alberta but in federal lands in the north and off the coast of Nova Scotia.

Lougheed rapped suggestions that Alberta should use its sources of supply to provide below-value gas to Central Canada, with the federal government using its northern land to provide high-cost gas to the United States.

IN TROUBLE

"If that's equity for Alberta, then confederation is really in trouble," he said.

"Would it not be good for Canada if the West, yes, and Alberta with its energy resources in particular, became a much stronger part of the Canadian nation in economic and social terms?"

A text of Lougheed's speech was released prior to delivery.

Counsellors' Counsellor Slates Lectures at UVic

Victoria area counsellors and people helpers will get a little counsel of their own when Dr. Howard Clinebell Jr. of Claremont, Calif., comes here for five days of lectures beginning June 2.

Clinebell, professor of pastoral counselling at the School of Theology in Claremont, will lead three seminars in counselling during his stay.

First seminar, for lay counsellors and people helpers, will be held Saturday, June 2, in room 144 of the MacLaurin Building, University of Victoria.

Sunday, June 3, Clinebell will give a seminar in Metropolitan United Church for people helpers, aimed at building interpersonal relationships in the church. This session is sponsored by Metropolitan and the Greater Victoria Citizens' Counselling Centre.

Starting Monday, June 4, is a three-day seminar in techniques of counselling for professional counsellors, including doctors, ministers and nurses.

It is sponsored by the counselling centre and UVic, and will be held in room 144 off the MacLaurin Building, Dr. Margaret McHugh, assistant professor in UVic's faculty of education, will be leading the seminar with Clinebell.

Accommodation will be provided in the university residences for people attending the three-day seminar from outside a 25-mile radius.

Interested people may register before May 25 by phoning Mrs. Mona Hundley at 592-1566.

Red Shield Campaign Hits $54,000

More than $54,000 has been donated to the Salvation Army's Red Shield Appeal campaign and returns are still coming in by mail.

Some 2,600 volunteers canvassed residents in the Greater Victoria area, and although donations from businesses and industry are still to be collected, organizers are confident they will reach the goal set at $59,100.

Last year the blitz raised $32,000 to finance the organization's alcoholic rehabilitation programs, senior citizens' homes and other activities.

He said the union wants the Le Soleil news composing centre and the proofreading section to be under the jurisdiction of editors.

Florian Sauvageau, managing editor, said publication was suspended following the resignation of 10 supervisory editors. The union representing newspaper staff said 23 editors resigned.

The Quebec City Journalists Union has accused management of instituting a lock-out, contrary to the terms of its working agreement which is valid until Dec. 31.

Sauvageau said there was no question of a lock-out.

Andre Dionne, union president, said the editors resigned in sympathy with the journalists' demands that technological change not lower the quality of the newspaper.

Telephone Answerers To Meet

The first meeting between the sides in the 15-week strike at Telephone Answering Service (Victoria) Limited, 727 Johnson, has been tentatively arranged, it was disclosed today.

The meeting is being arranged under the auspices of labor department mediation officer Clark Gilmour, said Jim McAvoy, business agent for Local 230 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Tentative date for the meeting with union and management representatives is May 16.

The strike began Jan. 19 when 20 IBEW members walked out after failure to reach agreement on a new contract. The strikers want a top rate of $2.75 an hour for persons with three years' experience, with beginners to start at the $2 provincial minimum wage.

They also want a night differential of 10 cents an hour and an automatic increase as minimum wage rates go up to maintain the 75-cent differential between beginner and senior wages.

Bedding Plants Need Care Before They Go in Garden

The care of bedding plants before they are put into the garden cannot be condensed into one simple sentence. Dozens of kinds of these flowering annuals are bought or raised by home gardeners each year. Each kind needs just that bit of special care which makes the plants worth growing.

Probably the most urgent need just now is that all kinds must be gradually hardened, or accustomed, to outdoor life.

Whether you buy or raise your own, even the hardy sweet peas, pansies and snapdragons must gradually be changed over from the indoor, or greenhouse, raising to the lower temperature, perhaps stronger sunlight, more wind, and in general, the less sheltered environment of the open garden.

The way to do this is, ideally with the aid of a simple roughly constructed coldframe as illustrated and described in a recent Saturday garden column in this paper.

Without a frame, you must resort to putting the plants out for the day and in at night for almost a week.

On a rainy mild night, such as last Wednesday, leave them out. Even two or three degrees of frost will harm the most hardy plants if they are exposed to it straight from indoor temperatures. At the other end of the outdoor growing season, they survive quite sharp frosts.

The tropical and semi-tropical bedding plants look miserable if put out before really warm days with nights assured of being at least above 45 degs. F. Scarlet salvia, kochia, amaranthus, ageratum and even nemesis all prefer a pleasant warmth.

Keep them sturdy by full exposure to sunlight and plenty of air even though you bring them into shelter at night.

Watch watering needs of all bedding annuals while in their boxes or flats. They must never be wet for they will rot because of crowded space. Also you risk forcing them into unnaturally spindly growth from which they never fully recover.

It's safer to keep them on the dry side free of wilting point while still confined to boxes.

The pinching back of annuals is done only on certain kinds of plants, and only on certain varieties of those.

As an instance, tall varieties of snapdragons can have the growing point removed when two pairs of leaves are expanded. The plants will then branch early though still retaining their tall habit. It would be foolish to pinch out centres from dwarf snags.

Schizanthus, the Butterfly-flower, is improved by pinching after four leaves expand, even with the dwarfier varieties. Resulting stems on taller varieties can also be pinched again after two leaves grow.

Petunias of tall or trailing varieties should be allowed freedom to develop. Dwarf mound varieties should be allowed freedom to develop. Dwarf mound varieties will grow according to their breeding if given suitable spacing.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the world's leading women bridge players is Hermine Baron, of Los Angeles. In 1964 and again in 1970, she was the winner of the McKenney Trophy, which is awarded annually by the American Contract Bridge League to the player who has won the most master points during the year. In 1964, she picked up 1370 master points, a staggering amount when one considers that 300 master points are required to become a "Life Master," the highest rank of player in the American Contract Bridge League.

Mrs. Baron is an unusual heroine. She was stricken by polio in her early teens, and has since been confined to a wheelchair from which she does her playing. She asks for no quarter and gives none — and usually emerges as the winner.

An example of Mrs. Baron's ability can be observed in today's deal. She was the South declarer.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Opening lead: Queen of hearts.

The opening heart lead was captured by Mrs. Baron's ace. Then came the king and ace of trumps. West discarding a diamond on the second trump lead. At this point, declarer knew that she had three sure losers, one in trumps and two in hearts. Hence, to fulfill the contract, it became imperative that the loss of a club trick be avoided.

To trick four, the ace of diamonds was cashed, after which dummy's remaining diamond was ruffed, thus eliminating diamonds from both the North and South hands. Now came the key play: the king of clubs was cashed.

A heart was next led. West taking the ten and returning a heart to East's king. East then cashed his high queen of trumps, after which he led the club jack. Dummy's ace won, the trick as West discarded a diamond. It now became a routine matter to finesse against East's ten of clubs.

Had declarer not cashed her club king before surrendering the lead, then East, after winning his trump queen, would have led, let us say, the ten of clubs. Declarer would then have had to guess how to play the club suit: did East or West possess the jack of clubs?

Susan shook her head. "Figure it out yourself," she told him. "The square of twice her age is 3698 more than twice the square of her age."

How old?

COLD TRUTH IN ADS

LONDON (CP) —The British Army has changed the tune of its advertising campaigns for new recruits. Instead of tempting prospective candidates with worldwide travel and a wide range of leisure facilities, the ads now read: "Join the Army — and see Belfast." A spokesman for the defence ministry said that most new recruits would probably qualify for service in Northern Ireland. "We believe people react favorably to the truth," he said.

Gorge Tackles United

Victoria Gorge Molsons and Victoria West-United will meet next Sunday at Royal Athletic Park in a Pacific Coast Soccer League semi-final playoff.

League champions West-United Blues and University of British Columbia Thunderbirds will clash in the other semi-final on the same day at Queen's Park in New Westminster.

Winners will then meet in a two-game, total-goal, home-and-away final series.

Molsons earned the right to meet United when they blanked Thunderbirds 3-0 at Royal Athletic Park Saturday night in a special playoff game to decide third place in the league. Molsons and UBC had finished the regular season in a third-place deadlock.

Newcomer Ken Paton, making only his second appearance for Gorge and his first in Victoria, had a good game and played a key part in both goals.

The tall centre-forward, who has had considerable experience as an amateur in Glasgow, helped snap a 0-0 tie that lasted until the 53-minute mark when he drew the defence and slipped a pass to George Hyne.

Hyne's hard drive beat goalkeeper Greg Weber, struck the bottom of the crossbar and went into the net.

Hyne and Paton featured in a fine passing move at the 79-minute mark, ending in a goal by Mark Robb.

Both Weber and Graham Lee played well but the Victoria goalkeeper had a much easier time than did the T-Bird tender.

BAYS NIPPED BY POINT AS 'LOMAS TAKE TITLES

VANCOUVER — One try made the difference Saturday when James Bay Athletic Association of Victoria was edged 7-6 by Vancouver Meralomas in the provincial club rugby final for the Rounstall Trophy.

Meralomas, the defending champions, got a try and a penalty goal to James Bays' two penalty goals in the hard-fought match at the University of British Columbia.

In the second-division final for the Province Cup, Meralomas took a 19-0 half-time lead and romped to a 45-0 win over Saanich Velox.

Fullback Barry Burnham booted a penalty goal to give Meralomas their 3-0 lead at half time in the first division match and Ian Walker crossed for a try to make it 7-0 just after the interval.

Meralomas dominated play, keeping the Bays under pressure for most of the game.

However, the Victoria team came back strongly toward the end and moved to within one point when Barry Robbins kicked two penalty goals. James Bay was still attacking at the final whistle.

Eric Martin was the big point-getter for Meralomas' second team. He scored a try and booted five conversions and a penalty goal for 17 points.

Jim Ryan and Ian Burtwell scored two tries each for Meralomas. Other tries were scored by Russ Jenkins, Graham Taylor and Gary Wellburn.

Soccer Tryouts Scheduled

Wilf Sadler of Victoria, who was elected vice-chairman of the B.C. Soccer Commission at the annual general meeting Sunday in Vancouver, announced that Vancouver Island tryouts for a provincial team which will compete in the Canada Games in August will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday at the University of Victoria.

Coaches David Keith, Larry DeCosta and Brian Hughes will pick a team that will play a similar squad from Vancouver in trial matches, May 27 at Royal Athletic Park and June 2 in Vancouver.

Interested players who were under the age of 21 as of Jan. 1, 1973, are invited to attend the tryout sessions.

Bill Coleman of Vancouver was elected chairman of the BCSC, replacing Stu Ross, who has served eight years on the governing body.

MacDonald Captures Gorge Event

Dan MacDonald fired a four-over-par 76 for a relatively easy victory Saturday in the Gorge Vale Golf Club junior championship.

The 17-year-old beat runners-up Brad Maxwell and Gary Ferguson by four strokes.

Ian Seymour finished fourth with 81.

A countback was needed to determine the junior handicap champion after Rick Lapointe and Pat Constable finished in a deadlock with net scores of 68. Lapointe shot a 91 and Constable had a 94.

On the countback, Lapointe was declared the winner.

LARGEST H-HAUL

A 31-year-old Saanich man was remanded in custody in provincial court today, charged, in connection with Victoria's largest heroin haul.

William Henry Pepper, of 2441 Foul Bay, was remanded without plea on a Sunday charge of possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

The man's arrest followed the seizure of 500 caps of the drug with an estimated street value of $10,000, Victoria drug squad said.

Pepper was picked up by drug undercover agents in the playground of St. Patrick's School at 10 p.m. Sunday. The man's arrest came at the conclusion of two weeks of investigation by the drug squad.

Mayors Want More

TORONTO (CP) — Mayors of most of Canada's largest cities united today in a demand for a bigger slice of federal-provincial revenues and for a greater say in municipalities in how the money is spent.

At the opening session of Cities for the '70s, there also was general agreement that the relative positions of all three levels of government should be redefined to give the municipalities more authority in running their affairs.

However, there was disagreement over the future of the British North America Act.

One view was that it should be scrapped and replaced with a modern instrument, while others held that this would take years and that the municipalities' financial problems could not wait that long for infusions of fresh money.

Mayors Ivor Dent of Edmonton and Peter Pollen of Victoria considered adequate financial changes could be made under the present constitution.

"We must nurture the BNA Act, which has protected one of the finest cultures in the world, the French culture of Quebec," Pollen said. "And before we throw out the bath water, let's be sure the baby is out of the bath."

Pollen attacked the "faceless bureaucracy" of Ottawa and said spending from that level should be placed under discipline to make more money available at the lower government levels.

None of the mayors suggested that the cities should be given power to impose an income tax of their own, a concept that had been trapped on Sunday by premiers Robert Bourassa of Quebec and William Davis of Ontario when asked about it at a news conference here.

Mayor Rod Sykes of Calgary spelled out the revenue sharing in detail by proposing that the federal and provincial governments hand over percentages of income tax, natural resources revenues, federal and provincial sales taxes collected in the cities, profits of provincially-owned, public utilities and liquor board profits.

Mayor Vic Cripps of Hamilton also criticized Ottawa spending and said the municipalities should go directly to the federal government and tell it:

"You must come to the rescue of the city if Canada is to

FIREMEN WATCH $2M BLAZE

KELOWNA (CP) — Firemen stood and watched a $2 million boat factory fire four miles south of here Sunday.

Fire authorities said the Canadian Fibreboard Ltd. plant in the Westside Industrial Park is not in a fire protection district.

An RCMP spokesman said the Kelowna fire department would only answer a call outside its jurisdiction if a life were at stake.

Two fire engines from the nearby Lakeview fire brigade arrived at the scene but were not authorized to go into action.

Scott Barnes, vice-president of the Spokane, Wash., based company, said damage amounted to more than $2 million.

Destroyed in the blaze were about 130 fibreboard boats, ranging in length from 14 to 28 feet which were completed or were under construction at the plant.

The fire put 126 men out of work.

"We were the largest boat manufacturer in Canada until today," Barnes said.

He accused the fire departments of apathy.

A Kelowna fire department spokesman said the company was told when the plant was built in 1968 that it would have no fire protection.

Barnes said he did not know whether the company would rebuild. It would take a year to get into production if it did, he said.

Barnes said the company may decide to expand its Spokane plant instead.

He said about 100 of the workers held a one-day strike last week before agreeing to their first contract following certification with Local 2076 of the Carpenters and Joiners Union.

There were no injuries in the fire and RCMP said Monday the cause of the fire was unknown.

Guerrillas Renegade

Times News Service

GUADALAJARA, Mexico — The kidnappers of U.S. Consul-General Terrence Leahy went back today on their promise to release him once 30 political prisoners were flown to Cuba and are reported to be making new demands, possibly involving a cash ransom.

There has been no word from them since Sunday when Leahy wrote that he was in "good health" and being treated well.

But as time passed with no release there were fears for his safety and government sources said still another factor might be involved — the kidnappers might be "too afraid" to release him immediately.

They pointed to a local news story in which police chief Jesus Ahumada Mercado was quoted as saying the kidnappers may already have been identified and that local authorities were ready to move against them as soon as the diplomat is freed.

There has been total official silence, however, on the case since Jalisco State Gov. Alberto Orozco Romero indicated Sunday night that new demands were being put forth by the guerrillas.

The governor later retracted the statement, saying he only knew of "rumors" of new demands.

But there was heightened speculation that a big cash ransom payment may now be a factor.

The only official statement on the case came from a consular spokesman who described the situation as "very delicate."

The demands (they were not disclosed) came hours after Mexico agreed to free the 30 prisoners and fly them to Cuba.

"The situation is very delicate," said a spokesman for the U.S. consulate in Guadalajara that Leahy headed. The spokesman declined to elaborate.

Earlier, officials said the guerrillas sent three more notes, to a Peruvian envoy, a Mexican official and the U.S. consulate.

The one sent to the Mexican official apparently contained new demands.

After first saying flatly that the note contained "new demands," Gov. Orozco withdrew the comment, saying he was "misunderstood" earlier.

The report on Leahy was contained in a brief letter he addressed to Orozco.

"I'm well and they're treating me well," said the letter, written in Spanish.

U.S. officials said Leahy's note added:

"I'm grateful for your help in making all the arrangements for my release, with the president (of Mexico). My captors have promised to free me and say they will go through with their promise at an opportune moment, so that all searching is stopped."

"If its not (the following word was illegible) they will delay my release."

'STATESMAN OF CANADIAN MUSIC' DIES

The "Statesman of Canadian Music," Sir Ernest MacMillan died Sunday in a Toronto hospital. He was 79.

Conductor of the Toronto Symphony from 1931-36, it was under his baton the orchestra took its place among the major symphonic organizations of North America.

Sir Ernest was knighted by King George V, the first person outside the United Kingdom outside the United Kingdom to be honored for his contribution to music. Obituary, Page 22.

OFY Hires 36,152

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be jobs for 36,152 young people in 4,334 Opportunities for Youth projects, it was announced today.

The number is up from the 29,954 employed in some 3,200 projects sponsored by the government in the 1972 OFY program.

The budget for this summer's OFY program was earlier estimated at $39,970,000. In today's statement, the secretary of state's department, responsible for OFY, said grants totalling $35.6 million have been approved to date.

A spokesman said the remainder of the budget will go for administration costs. He said that only 1,300 approved projects could be announced now because of a delay in translation for the remainder. The department said 32 per cent of OFY participants this summer will be university students, 27 per cent community college students, 31 per cent secondary or high-school students, and 10 per cent non-students.

With increased emphasis on participation in rural areas, the urban to rural ratio of projects now is 45 per cent urban to 55 per cent rural.

City Soldier Under Fire In Vietnam

Times News Service

SAIGON — A Victoria man serving with the ICSS was the lone Canadian aboard a truce team helicopter which came under fire near the Cambodian border Sunday.

Capt. Charles Dillon, 29, of 925 Esquimalt, was one of nine people aboard the chopper when it was fired on, but not hit, by several bursts of small arms fire.

In another incident Sunday, a jeep carrying truce observers struck a land mine in the Central Highlands. Nobody was hurt in that incident either.

In Ottawa, an external affairs department spokesman termed the incidents "deplorable."

Sources said the fire broke out as the helicopter craft descended from 3,000 to 1,500 feet to avoid rain squalls five miles northwest of Vi Thanh.

Canadian sources said the chopper was not hit but was forced to turn back to Tri Ton, the origin of the flight 50 miles northwest of Saigon.

Canadian diplomats and newsmen reported Wednesday that two ICSS helicopters were fired on over Communist-held territory on a flight to Gio Linh along the demilitarized zone.

The Viet Cong later denied the reports and said the only firing that day was at an unmanned U.S. reconnaissance plane that appeared over Communist-claimed territory.

In other incidents Sunday, Saigon command spokesman Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien said Communist saboteurs wounded one person and damaged a locomotive and five boxcars in the mining of the newly re-opened Saigon-to-Xuan Lox rail line. Trains resumed operation on the 50 mile stretch of track Friday.

Meanwhile, the first Mekong River convoy to reach Phnom Penh in two weeks arrived in the Cambodian capital today after losing a tanker to Communist fire.

Reports reached Phnom Penh that Cambodian insurgents overran a post 34 miles northwest of the capital last Friday, captured about 100 troops and slaughtered them.

MILLION-DOLLAR LOT SOLD IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — A corner lot at the downtown intersection of Georgia and Bute streets, measuring 132 feet by 132 feet, has been sold for $1 million, a 27 per cent increase since the last sale in December.

Identities of the buyer and seller were not disclosed by the real estate broker.

The property changed hands in December for $785,000, and before that in the early 1950s for $125,000.

Former NDP MLA Named Energy Boss

Five appointments to the new B.C. Energy Commission, which will ultimately have the power to regulate prices of petroleum and natural gas products in the province, were announced today by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

James Rhodes, 42, a Surrey businessman and former NDP MLA for Delta constituency from 1960 to 1963 has been named chairman.

Last year, Rhodes was president of the Cloverdale Board of Trade and he is a former chairman of the Surrey advisory planning commission.

Robert Smith, 51, a British-born chartered accountant now serving as financial adviser to the National Energy Board is the other full-time commissioner.

Smith, a former financial staff member of B.C.'s Public Utilities Commission for five years, to 1966, will be the manager of the energy commission.

Three part-time members of the commission appointed are:

Donald Johannessen, 36, a Victoria teacher since 1966 and former unsuccessful NDP candidate for Saanich and The Islands in the 1969 provincial election.

Johannessen, who lives at 505 Parker Avenue, gained a bachelor of arts degree in economics from the University of Victoria.

His research work for U.Vic's social sciences research centre included a bibliography on the petroleum industry and an analysis of the Morrow Royal Commission on gasoline price structure in B.C.

John Caplette, 44, of Surrey, a farmland consultant, who has specialized in pollution and land reclamation problems. He is a member of the B.C. Institute of Agriologists and the Agricultural Institute of Canada and adviser to the BEIRUT (UPI) — Lebanese government and army authorities reached a tentative agreement today with Palestinian guerrilla leaders to end differences which caused four days of clashes last week.

SCARCITY SHUTS GAS STATIONS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government figures show that 342 gasoline stations — mostly in the midwest and southeast — have been forced to shut down due to the shortage of gasoline, according to Rep. Les Aspin (D-Wis.).

Aspin, who said he obtained the statistics from the Office of Emergency Preparedness, said the fuel crisis also threatens to drive out of business another 930 stations. He said the government figures represented "just the tip of the iceberg."

"By the middle of August, thousands of stations, mostly independent stations that sell cut-rate gas, will probably be closed and thousands more will be very short on supplies," Aspin said in a statement Sunday.

Aspin said the midwest and southeast sections of the nation have been particularly hard hit because they have a proportionately higher number of independent stations and refineries. He claimed 136 stations has closed in the midwest and 117 in the southeast.

Meanwhile, U.S. Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar downgraded today the threat of a country-wide gas shortage this summer.

The problem is "worrysome, but not serious," he said. "There will be limited local shortages," he added, but he said he saw no prospects of gas rationing.

Nixon Thanked Me: Dean Quoted

Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Ousted White House counsel John Dean is prepared to testify that President Nixon personally congratulated him last September for covering up administration involvement in the Watergate incident, according to the two largest weekly newsmagazines in the U.S.

Time and Newsweek, in slightly different accounts, said Nixon's purported remarks came in a meeting among the president, Dean and another top White House aide.

The Florida White House, on Nixon's behalf, issued today a sweeping denial of any presidential involvement in the Watergate scandal or a subsequent cover-up in the wake of the news magazine stories.

In response to questions, deputy press secretary Gerald Warren asked if the reference to "Watergate operations" extended to 1972 campaign espionage and sabotage, said: "It extends to all the matters that are now under discussion."

Newsweek quoted Dean as saying Nixon was in the Oval Office with Dean and White House chief of staff H. R. Haldean when the president said: "Good job, John. Bob told me what a great job you've been doing."

Time's version said Nixon, Dean and the president's domestic-affairs adviser, John Ehrlichman, were present and that Nixon said: "John here tells me you've been doing fine work."

Neither magazine identified its source.

However, one legal source who has been close to the Watergate case said the "tidbits" Dean is reported to have given government investigators were used as bait in an effort to win the 34-year-old lawyer immunity from prosecution.

Dean has told them he has other evidence, including White House documents, to substantiate his claims, the source said.

The documents presumably are the 43-page volume and eight supporting papers that Dean's lawyer described Friday in U.S. District Court here.

Dean gave the keys to a safe-deposit box to Chief Judge John Sirica, saying the box contains the classified documents taken from the White House to prevent their being destroyed.

The source said the government has refused to grant Dean immunity in exchange for his testimony.

Judge John Sirica today ordered Watergate conspirator Howard Hunt to testify before a special Senate committee on the bugging case, granting him immunity from prosecution.

Senate sources said the Watergate committee also had asked for immunity grants for testimony by Jeb Magruder.

PULITZER PRIZE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Washington Post today won the 37th annual Pulitzer Prize for distinguished public service in journalism for its investigative reporting of the Watergate scandal.

In announcing the gold medal award, the trustees of Columbia University cited two Post reporters, Carl Bernstein, 29, and Robert Woodward, 30, for playing "so dominant a part in the inquiry and... development of much of the evidence that now is public property."

The Times has been carrying stories from these investigating reporters.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sorensen have appointed themselves a historical society of two — determined to save one of Saanich's most historic landmarks.

It's the Oldfield mansion, built in 1906 when Winnipeg realtor J. H. Oldfield came west and bought himself 550 acres in the lush valley that overlooks the road named for his family.

Oldfield was one of the partners in the company that back in 1908 bought the Uplands site and made the initial plans that led to Oak Bay's posh residential district.

One of the wealthiest men to enter the Uplands gates never lived there.

He was Henry Kaiser, the American shipbuilder, aluminum industrialist and car manufacturer.

When he was in the Uplands Kaiser worked as a laborer, building the original roads.

The man who helped plan so long ago what today is still one of the most preferred residential areas in North America spared no effort when it came to planning his own home.

But when the Sorensens, who came from Nanaimo, first set eyes on it in 1971 it had fallen into sorry shape. "The roof was leaking like a sieve, you'd get drowned out if you passed under one area when it was raining," Sorensen recalls.

"Birds and wasps were nesting all around the roof.

We knew we were foolhardy to take on such a job but this house is pure Canadiana. It has a style of its own. It's not pseudo Tudor or anything else, it's part of B.C.'s history. We felt we just had to save the house."

Since 1971 the Sorensens have concentrated on making the house safe and watertight from the outside and hacking away the overgrowth, ivy and weeds that hid the beauty of the 8½ acres remaining in the estate. They've also uncovered two small lakes that two years ago were almost obliterated by felled trees and other debris.

Even inside the house, yet to be tackled by the Sorensens, traces of former elegance are unmistakable.

When Oldfield arrived in Saanich he hired a crew of Chinese to clear his land and two carpenters to build his family home.

"The carpenters were paid two bits a day and it took them two years to finish it," Sorensen reports.

Their workmanship is there to speak of another world today, wooden pegs, not nails, highlighting the panelling.

In the basement of solid stone mighty tree trunks hold up the beams, solid as the day they were placed there.

Also there is a huge solid water tank capable of holding thousands of gallons of rainwater.

There are leaded windows everywhere, some of them right with colored designs. Huge cavernous fireplaces that once gorged 36 cords of wood a year are ornately tiled.

Now the house is heated by electricity — when the Sorensens can fit it into the family budget.

"A previous owner had the whole system put into electricity," Sorensen explains, "paying $7,000 for a 700-amp circuit, seven times the amount needed for a normal home!"

Their love affair with the house being such a costly one, the Sorensens make their headquarters in only parts of the house when winter hits — making quick "four-minute flat dashes" from room to room when necessary.

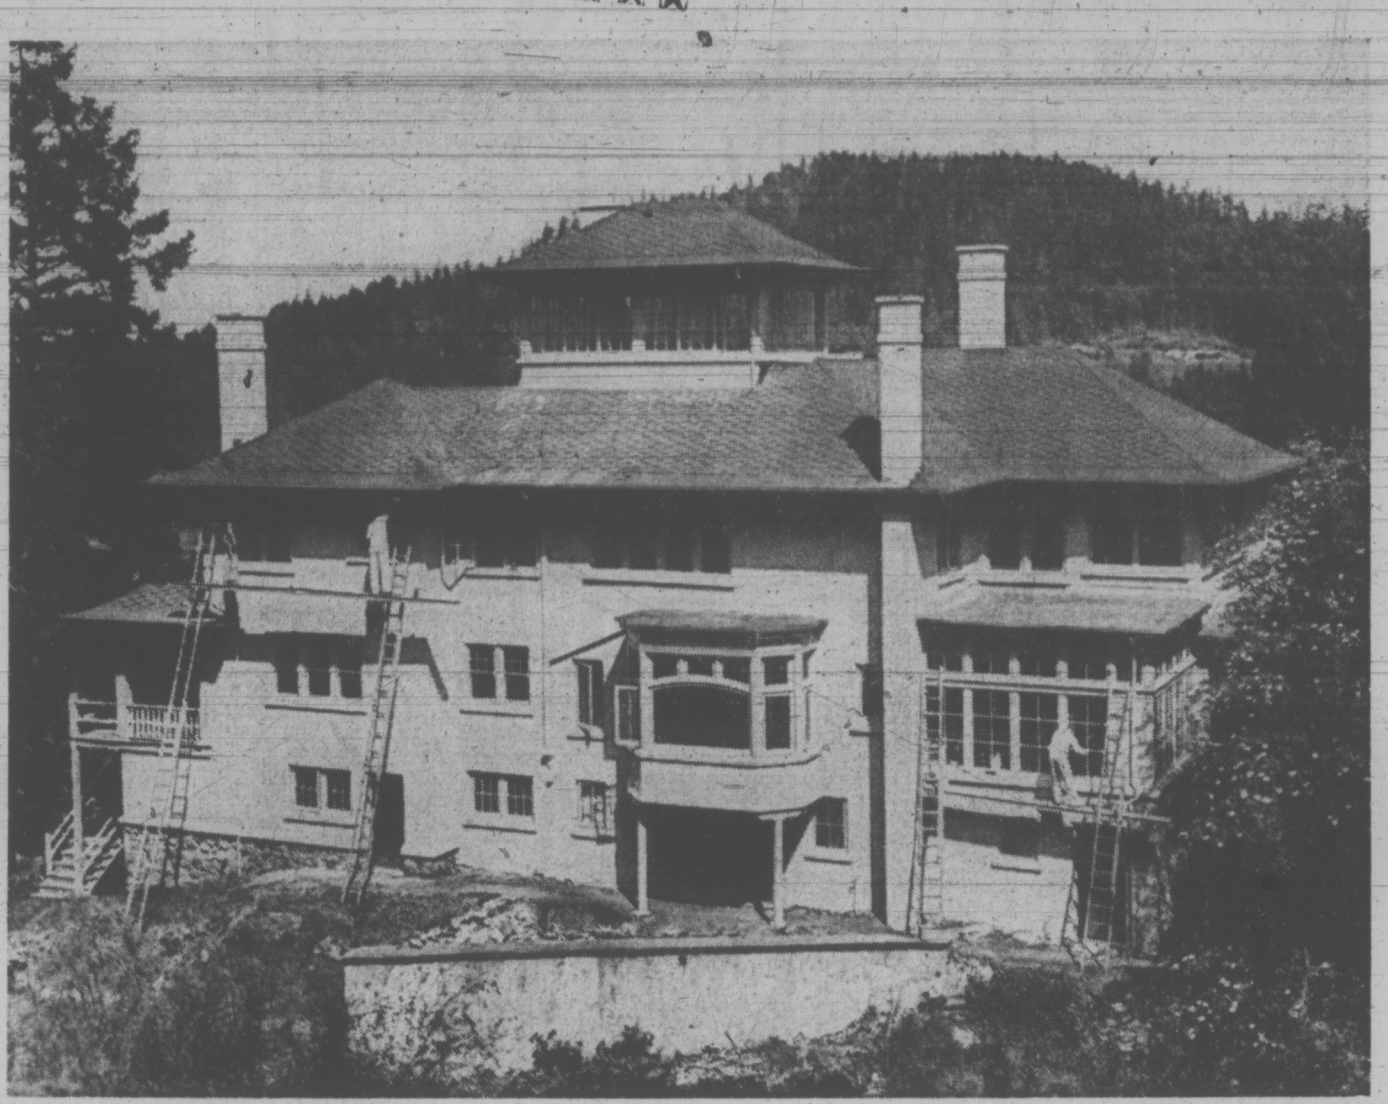

Standing in the huge entrance hall, Sorensen said the temperature there reached 28 on more than one occasion.

Now that the outside of the mansion is resuming its long-lost elegance the Sorensens often get callers who spot it from down in the valley. Some of them are interested in buying the old mansion to turn into a restaurant or some other commercial venture.

But the Sorensens stand pat.

Sorensen admits that the huge house is not the most practical of residences for a couple with grown children. "But," he says, "I don't like to see it exploited and we're hoping we'll be able to find a use for the old home that will preserve it."

He adds, "I've always been a little bit of a nut about history. I guess that's why we tackled this job in the first place."

Just What You Wanted In a Thousand Pieces

It shows my age, I guess, but I remember when you saw something in a store and bought it and had it sent out to your house it arrived at your house just the way it was in the store. Do you remember that, Gramps?

I mean you'd see — say — a storage closet and you'd buy it and presently a large truck would appear with three men in it, a very large, muscular young man and two tiny, ancient men, and the two tiny, ancient men, directed by the shouts of the large, muscular young man, would stagger in with the closet and put it just where you wanted it and that would be the end of it.

This does not happen any more. Almost everything you see in a store these days has been put together to show you how it ought to look, but when it arrives at your house the chances are that it will be neatly boxed and broken down into anything up to a thousand components.

Somewhere inside this crate will be several pages of agate type, headed "Assembly Instructions" or "Installation Procedures," along with little plastic bags containing a tangle of nuts, bolts, screws and other assorted hardware, instantly inducing panic and deep loneliness.

I've a friend who, emboldened by the sudden affluence of a tax refund, recently bought a bicycle and a lawn-mower, both British-made, and a magnificent, canopied-lawn-swing, made in Japan.

These articles looked perfectly swell in the store, but arrived in the usual neat crates with the usual neat, incomprehensible instructions for putting them together.

Being more than ordinarily inept, my friend soon had the parts for all three items mixed together, had created the world's first lawn-swing with handle-bars and was just generally in a state of complete collapse.

I have seen the instructions provided by the Japanese manufacturer of the lawn swing. They are a collector's item, perhaps the finest example extant of impeccable English that makes absolutely no sense whatever. My friend had got no further than the opening words, "Enter tubular cross-bar 'A' through reverse canvas opening" before he threw up his hands and ran, sobbing, to his bedroom.

His conviction, that the Japanese are conspiring to conquer the world by creating mass hysteria, may not be far off.

The only trouble with this theory is the fact that all manufacturers seem equally intent in spreading havoc and may, indeed, employ the same team of instruction-writers, united in their complete contempt for we, the new breed of do-it-yourselfers.

Only last week the instruction writers for Spacemaker Products Ltd., of Mississauga, Ont., and Acmetrack Ltd., of Rexdale, Ont. muscled in on my own well-ordered life and had me keening with frustration.

In the store, itself, the Spacemaker, a six-shelf metal cupboard, and the louvered door made by Acmetrack were all made up in working order. "Just the thing for that little alcove," my wife said of the shelves. "Just the thing for hiding the shelves," she said of the louvered door. So I wrote out the cheque, thinking how simple life had become.

They arrived together in neat, flat, cardboard boxes pre-packaged in Rexdale and Mississauga.

The "Installation Procedure" for the louvered door began: "Drill all holes seven-sixteenth dia. x one-and-one-half min. deep. Locate pivot holes (holes nearest jambs) one-and-one-quarter inch from edge of door. See Step No. 3 (B). Locate Guide Wheel holes seven-eighths inch from edge of door."

The "Assembly Instructions" for the shelves began: "Turn all shelf pans upside down and 'press and click' shelf clips. Join two post sections together with a splice bar and quarter-inch long bolts and nuts. IMPORTANT — Open centre hole on splice bar MUST be No. 22 from bottom of post assemblies."

An all-consuming lassitude had suddenly come upon me, the inner defensive mechanism that protects me from a world gone mad, and I lay there with the shades drawn in my locked bedroom, remembering the days when you saw something in the store and bought it and had it sent out to your house and it arrived at your house just the way it was in the store. You do remember that, don't you, Gramps?

Month-End Start Up For Ferry

Starting date for the Canadian Pacific freight ferry from Swartz Bay to Vancouver has been set for the end of May, the company said today.

Earlier the company had hoped to have the inaugural run of the Carrier Princess on May 15.

The ferry will go from Swartz Bay to downtown Vancouver in three hours and is designed mainly as a truck carrier. However, passenger cars will be accommodated on a reserve basis. Some foot passengers will also be carried.

The Carrier Princess will have a passenger-lounge and a light snack bar. Charge will be $5 for cars, $3 per person.

Sailing times from Swartz Bay are 6 a.m., 1 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. while departure times from Vancouver are 9:30 a.m., 5 p.m. and 1:30 a.m.

The Vancouver landing dock is about halfway between the Bayshore Inn and the CPR train station on Burrard Inlet.

Hefty Increase in Taxes Face Oak Bay Residents

Oak Bay council will bring down its budget tonight and residents face a hefty increase in taxes unless substantial cuts are made.

After two budget-paring sessions the general and debt rate still stands at 46.50, 4.4 mills more than in 1972.

Add to this a school tax upped from 31.14 mills to 32.71, a hospital mill rate of

Only one out of 12 auto insurance agencies surveyed by the Times has stopped writing automobile insurance as the March, 1974, deadline for compulsory government insurance draws closer.

The survey was prompted by remarks made by A. E. Warrick, chairman of the British Columbia Advisory Council of the Insurance Bureau of Canada, last week.

Thousands of motorists in the province are being forced to look for new companies to carry their insurance, he said, as companies go out of business, stop writing auto insurance or refuse to take high risk drivers.

"How stupid a remark," said John Oster of John Oster Insurance Agencies.

"If he is not writing it he shouldn't be in the business," Oster said, referring to automobile insurance agencies.

"I have turned nobody away from my office," he added.

R. Douglas Agencies was the only firm contacted that was not seeing any new auto insurance.

"We have been (selling auto insurance) up until a week ago," and "We're renewing what we have," said Ron Douglas.

GET TOUGHER

Most insurance firms say things are going to get tougher as the deadline for government insurance approaches and there is less profit in writing a policy for only a few months.

A few insurance underwriting firms have already pulled out of the auto insurance business which makes it tougher for an agent to place a policy.

"The market is definitely going to get tougher as the deadline draws nearer," said Bob Cumberbirch of Cumberbirch Insurance Agencies.

At present many local agents are putting many auto insurance policies through to the Vancouver insurance exchange.

But agents only make a seven per cent commission on policies handled by the exchange as opposed to 12 per cent if they handle the policies through their own firms. Victoria agents complain that the Vancouver zenith number is continually busy so they often have to wait hours to place one policy.

Considering the small commission and the time involved some agents are not too keen on getting new auto business, according to some agents.

B. C. Foley of the Century Insurance Company says his firm is still selling liability insurance on the 1972 rates, but they will be paying claims on existing policies into 1973 and 1974 — policies on which the rates would normally be higher in 1973 and 1974.

LESS COMMISSION

As the deadline approaches agents will receive smaller commissions on short policies. Human nature being what it is, this will also inhibit agents from seeking new business.

Warrick has suggested that the government's new insurance corporation begin selling interim policies now for persons unable to get insurance in the normal way.

Highways Minister Bob Strachan, chairman of the B.C. insurance corporation said last week he had received assurances from the industry that companies would do everything they could to make the transition to government insurance as smooth as possible.

Arsonist Forces Shutdown

Two weekend fires, which have forced Victoria Paving Co. Ltd. to temporarily stop production, are believed to be the work of an arsonist, Victoria Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said today.

Firemen were called to extinguish a piece of canvas burning on top of a 9,000-gallon liquid asphalt tank at the company's Bridge Street plant shortly after 3 a.m. Sunday.

Firemen were called again at 6:21 p.m. to extinguish a fire burning under the same tank.

"It's awfully hard to get asphalt to burn," said Victoria Paving manager E. L. "Tut" Jones. "It's almost impossible."

Jones estimated damage at $6,000, but added insurance investigators are inspecting the plant today.

Spring is the peak season for Victoria Paving and the company was producing a volume of $7,000 to $8,000 a day, said Jones.

Inspector Mike Heppel of Victoria's fire department is meeting with the company's management today for further investigation.

Course Eyed On Environment

A proposal for an experimental environmental studies program will be considered by University of Victoria senate at its monthly meeting Wednesday.

The program, outlined in the report of a senate ad hoc committee, already has the approval of the faculty of arts and science.

"An environmental studies program offers the University of Victoria an exciting opportunity to become increasingly responsive to the community's needs, and to further advance its academic reputation," says the ad hoc committee.

The committee, set up a year ago by the senate is chaired by Dr. Derrick Sewell, professor of geography. The committee proposes a three-pronged program:

A program for increasing environmental awareness, possibly third and four-year credit courses plus a continuing education course for optional credit. This could be initiated at relatively little cost, says the committee.

A specialist training course in environmental studies.

An environmental studies institute to do research in the field.

An early start could be made on the program, says the committee's report, because UVic already has faculty experienced in this area.

A number of agencies have already indicated their willingness to furnish financial support provided that the university also made a clear commitment to the program, it says.

Suburbs Push for Better Bus Service

Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association is the latest Saanich community group to ask for better bus service in the suburbs.

But secretary Mrs. John Parker, who wrote B.C. Transit Bureau pointing out deficiencies in existing public transportation in the Northridge-Royal Oak area, is puzzled and annoyed by the response.

She said she was told by bureau director Victor Parker, "If we're willing to pay more taxes we'll get better bus service, which is kind of a slap in the face because in Saanich we already pay high taxes."

And Parker, she said, found her suggestion for a complementary arrangement between B.C. Hydro transit buses and Pacific Commuter (privately operated) a strange one.

Three other community groups and Saanich council all want improved Hydro bus service in the municipality.

Mrs. Clay said there is no frequent Hydro transit service north of Judah and Glanford, about one mile south of Royal Oak shopping community.

She said Parker pointed out that Royal Oak lies in a private operator's territory where higher fares are permitted.

(Pacific Commuter's existing schedule for Saanich Peninsula service provides for five north-south trips a day through Royal Oak.)

Expanding population, the needs of older people without private transportation and the lack of cheap, convenient transport for students and children justify improved service in the district, Mrs. Clay said.

She supports a request by Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association for east-west bus service in Saanich, which could involve McKenzie or Royal Oak avenues.

The council also favors better routing of Hydro buses for east-west access.

"New schools are going in, more houses are being built in the Glanford area . . . many, many new houses are in Northridge," Mrs. Clay said.

"Many university students have a difficult time," Mrs. Clay said. For those north of Judah there is no transit and for others in that area connections must be made downtown.

For Northridge residents the existing system requires a quarter-mile walk to regular Carey and Wilkinson buses, and for off-peak times a longer walk — about a mile.

Since Hydro is supported by 100 per cent of the people through their taxes, it should provide service to everyone, Mrs. Clay believes. As it is, only 10 per cent can enjoy transit services.

Northridge Community Association is asking for improved service on its own besides the Royal Oak Ratepayers' request. Other recent suggestions for better transit have been made by the Victoria branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada, seeking improvement in outlying areas; residents of Mount Douglas Court development on Arrow, petitioning council for additional service and individuals writing to council.

LARGEST H-HAUL

A 31-year-old Saanich man was remanded in custody in provincial court today, charged in connection with Victoria's largest heroin haul.

William Henry Pepper, of 2441 Foul Bay, was remanded without plea on a Sunday charge of possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

The man's arrest followed the seizure of 500 caps of the drug with an estimated street value of $10,000, Victoria drug squad said.

Pepper was picked up by drug undercover agents in the playground of St. Patrick's School at 10 p.m. Sunday. The man's arrest came at the conclusion of two weeks of investigation by the drug squad.

Mayors Want More

TORONTO (CP). Mayors of most of Canada's largest cities united today in a demand for a bigger slice of federal-provincial revenues and for a greater say for municipalities in how the money is spent.

At the opening session of Cities for the '70s, there also was general agreement that the relative positions of all three levels of governments should be redefined to give the municipalities more authority in running their affairs.

However, there was disagreement over the future of the British North America Act.

One view was that it should be scrapped and replaced with a modern instrument, while others held that this would take years and that the municipalities' financial problems could not wait that long for infusions of fresh money.

Mayors Ivor Dent of Edmonton and Peter Pollen of Victoria considered adequate financial changes could be made under the present constitution.

"We must nurture the BNA Act, which has protected one of the finest cultures in the world, the French culture of Quebec," Pollen said. "And before we throw out the bath water, let's be sure the baby is out of the bath."

Pollen attacked the "faceless bureaucracy" of Ottawa and said spending from that level should be placed under discipline to make more money available at the lower government levels.

None of the mayors suggested that the cities should be given power to impose an income tax of their own, a concept that had been trumped on Sunday by premiers Robert Bourassa of Quebec and William Davis of Ontario when asked about it at a news conference here.

Mayor Rod Sykes of Calgary spelled out the revenue-sharing in most detail by proposing that the federal and provincial governments hand over percentages of income tax, natural resources revenues, federal and provincial sales taxes collected in the cities, profits of provincially-owned public utilities and liquor board profits.

Mayor Vic Capps of Hamilton also criticized Ottawa spending and said the municipalities should go directly to the federal government and tell it:

"You must come to the rescue of the city if Canada is to go forward."

SCARCITY SHUTS GAS STATIONS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government figures show that 342 gasoline stations — mostly in the midwest and southeast — have been forced to shut down due to the shortage of gasoline, according to Rep. Les Aspin (D-Wis.).

Aspin, who said he obtained the statistics from the Office of Emergency Preparedness, said the fuel crisis also threatens to drive out of business another 930 stations. He said the government figures represented "just the tip of the iceberg."

"By the middle of August, thousands of stations, mostly independent stations that sell cut-rate gas, will probably be closed and thousands more will be very short on supplies," Aspin said in a statement Sunday.

Aspin said the midwest and southeast sections of the nation have been particularly hard hit because they have a proportionately higher number of independent stations and refineries. He claimed 136 stations has closed in the midwest and 117 in the southeast.

Meanwhile, U.S. Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar downgraded today the threat of a country-wide gas shortage this summer.

The problem is "worrisome, but not serious," he said. "There will be limited local shortages," he added, but he said he saw no prospects of gas rationing.

In Tripoli, Libya, a nine-man team representing western oil companies assembled today for talks with the world's major oil producers on higher crude oil prices.

BRIDGE COLLAPSES in Denver, Colo., as the South Platte River turns into a torrent of fast-moving water. All-day rain Sunday dumped three

FIREMEN WATCH $2M BLAZE

KELOWNA (CP) — Firemen stood and watched a $2 million boat factory fire four miles south of here Sunday.

Fire authorities said the Canadian Fibreform Ltd. plant in the Westside Industrial Park is not in a fire protection district.

An RCMP spokesman said the Kelowna fire department would only answer a call outside its jurisdiction if a life were at stake.

Two fire engines from the nearby Lakeview fire brigade arrived at the scene but were not authorized to go into action.

Scott Barnes, vice-president of the Spokane, Wash., based company, said damage amounted to more than $2 million.

Destroyed in the blaze were about 130 fibreglass boats, ranging in length from 14 to 28 feet which were completed or were under construction at the plant.

The fire put 126 men out of work.

"We were the largest boat manufacturer in Canada until today," Barnes said.

He accused the fire departments of apathy.

A Kelowna fire department spokesman said the company was told when the plant was built in 1968 that it would have no fire protection.

Barnes said he did not know whether the company would rebuild. It would take a year to get into production if it did, he said.

Barnes said the company may decide to expand its Spokane plant instead.

He said about 100 of the workers held a one-day strike last week before agreeing to their first contract following certification with Local 2076 of the Carpenters and Joiners Union.

There were no injuries in the fire and RCMP said Monday the cause of the fire was unknown.

Guerrillas Renegade

Times News Service
GUADALAJARA, Mexico — The kidnappers of U.S. Consul-General Terrence Leonard went back today on their promise to release him once 30 political prisoners were flown to Cuba and are reported to be making new demands, possibly involving a cash ransom.

There has been no word from them since Sunday when Leonard wrote that he was in "good health" and being treated well.

But as time passed with no release there were fears for his safety and government sources said still another factor might be involved — the kidnappers might be "too afraid" to release him immediately.

They pointed to a local news story in which police chief Jesus Ahumada Mercado was quoted as saying the kidnappers may already have been identified and that local authorities were ready to move against them as soon as the diplomat is freed.

There has been total official silence, however, on the case since Jalisco State Gov. Alberto Orozco Romero indicated Sunday night that new demands were being put forth by the guerrillas.

The governor later retracted the statement, saying he only knew of "rumors" of new demands.

But there was heightened speculation that a big cash ransom payment may now be a factor.

The only official statement on the case came from a consular spokesman who described the situation as "very delicate."

The demands (they were not disclosed) came hours after Mexico agreed to free the 30 prisoners and fly them to Cuba.

"The situation is very delicate," said a spokesman for the U.S. consulate in Guadalajara that Leonard headed. The spokesman declined to elaborate.

Earlier, officials said the guerrillas sent three more notes, to a Peruvian envoy, a Mexican official and the U.S. consulate.

The one sent to the Mexican official apparently contained new demands.

After first saying flatly that the note contained "new demands," Gov. Orozco withdrew the comment, saying he was "misunderstood" earlier.

The report on Leonard was contained in a brief letter he addressed to Orozco.

"I'm well and they're treating me well," said the letter, written in Spanish.

U.S. officials said Leonard's note added:

"I'm grateful for your help in making all the arrangements for my release, with the president (of Mexico). My captors have promised to free me and say they will go through with their promise at an opportune moment, so that all searching is stopped."

"If its not (the following word was illegible) they will delay my release."

'STATESMAN OF CANADIAN MUSIC' DIES

The "Statesman of Canadian Music," Sir Ernest MacMillan died Sunday in a Toronto hospital. He was 79.

Conductor of the Toronto Symphony from 1931-56, it was under his baton the orchestra took its place among the major symphonic organizations of North America.

Sir Ernest was knighted by King George V, the first person outside the United Kingdom to be honored for his contribution to music. Obituary, Page 22.

OFY Hires 36,152

OTTAWA (CP) — There will be jobs for 36,152 young people in 4,334 Opportunities for Youth projects, it was announced today.

The number is up from the 29,954 employed in some 3,200 projects sponsored by the government in the 1972 OFY program.

The budget for this summer's OFY program was earlier estimated at $39,970,000. In today's statement, the secretary of state's department, responsible for OFY, said grants totalling $35.6 million have been approved to date.

A spokesman said the remainder of the budget will go for administration costs. He said that only 1,300 approved projects could be announced now because of a delay in translation for the remainder.

The department said 32 per cent of OFY participants this summer will be university students, 27 per cent community college students, 31 per cent secondary or high-school students, and 10 per cent non-students.

With increased emphasis on participation in rural areas, the urban to rural ratio of projects now is 45 per cent urban to 55 per cent rural.

City Soldier Under Fire In Vietnam

Times News Services

SAIGON — A Victoria man serving with the ICSS was the lone Canadian aboard a truce team helicopter which came under fire near the Cambodian border Sunday.

Capt. Charles Dillon, 29, of 925 Esquimalt, was one of nine people aboard the chopper when it was fired-on, but not hit, by several bursts of small arms fire.

In another incident Sunday, a jeep carrying truce observers struck a land mine in the Central Highlands. Nobody was hurt in that incident either.

In Ottawa, an external affairs department spokesman termed the incidents "deplorable."

Sources said the fire broke out as the helicopter craft descended from 3,000 to 1,500 feet to avoid rain squalls five miles northwest of Vi Thanh.

Canadian sources said the chopper was not hit but was forced to turn back to Tri Ton, the origin of the flight 50 miles northwest of Saigon.

Canadian diplomats and newsmen reported Wednesday that two ICSS helicopters were fired on over Communist-held territory on a flight to Gio Linh along the demilitarized zone.

The Viet Cong later denied the reports and said the only firing that day was at an unmanned U.S. reconnaissance plane that appeared over Communist-claimed territory.

In other incidents Sunday, Saigon command spokesman Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien said Communist saboteurs wounded one person and damaged a locomotive and five boxcars in the mining of the newly re-opened Saigon-to-Xuan Loc rail line. Trains resumed operation on the 50 mile stretch of track Friday.

Meanwhile, the first Mekong River convoy to reach Phnom Penh in two weeks arrived in the Cambodian capital today after losing a tanker to Communist fire.

Reports reached Phnom Penh that Cambodian insurgents overran a post 34 miles northwest of the capital last Friday, captured about 100 troops and slaughtered them.

MILLION-DOLLAR LOT SOLD IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — A corner lot at the downtown intersection of Georgia and Bute streets, measuring 132 feet by 132 feet, has been sold for $1 million, a 27 per cent increase since the last sale in December.

Identities of the buyer and seller were not disclosed by the real estate broker.

The property changed hands in December for $785,000, and before that in the early 1950s for $125,000.

Former NDP MLA Named Energy Boss

Five appointments to the new B.C. Energy Commission, which will ultimately have the power to regulate prices of petroleum and natural gas products in the province, were announced today by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

James Rhodes, 42, a Surrey businessman and former NDP MLA for Delta constituency from 1960 to 1963, has been named chairman.

Last year, Rhodes was president of the Cloverdale Board of Trade and he is a former chairman of the Surrey advisory planning commission.

Robert Smith, 51, a British-born chartered accountant now serving as financial adviser to the National Energy board, is the other full-time commissioner.

Smith, a former financial staff member of B.C.'s Public Utilities Commission for five years, to 1966, will be the manager of the energy commission.

Three part-time members of the commission appointed are:

Donald Johannessen, 36, a Victoria teacher since 1966 and former unsuccessful NDP candidate for Saanich and The Islands in the 1969 provincial election.

Johannessen, who lives at 505 Parker Avenue, gained a bachelor of arts degree in economics from the University of Victoria.

His research work for UVic's social sciences research centre included a bibliography on the petroleum industry and an analysis of the Morrow Royal Commission on gasoline price structure in B.C.

John Caplette, 44, of Surrey, a farmland consultant, who has specialized in pollution and land reclamation problems. He is a member of the B.C. Institute of Agrologists and the Agricultural Institute of Canada and adviser to the WASHINGTON — Ousted White House counsel John Dean is prepared to testify that President Nixon personally congratulated him last September for covering up administration involvement in the Watergate incident, according to the two largest weekly newsmagazines in the U.S.

Time and Newsweek, in slightly different accounts, said Nixon's purported remarks came in a meeting among the president, Dean and another top White House aide.

The Florida White House, on Nixon's behalf, "issued today a sweeping denial of any presidential involvement in the Watergate scandal or a subsequent cover-up in the wake of the news magazine stories.

In response to questions, deputy press secretary Gerald Warren, asked if the reference to "Watergate operations" extended to 1972 campaign espionage and sabotage, said: "It extends to all the matters that are now under discussion."

Newsweek quoted Dean as saying Nixon was in the Oval Office with Dean and White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman when the president said: "Good job, John. Bob told me what a great job you've been doing."

Time's version said Nixon, Dean and the president's domestic-affairs adviser, John Ehrlichman, were present and that Nixon said: "John here tells me you've been doing fine work."

Neither magazine identified its source.

However, one legal source who has been close to the Watergate case said the "tidbits" Dean is reported to have given government investigators were used as bait in an effort to win the 34-year-old lawyer immunity from prosecution.

Dean has told them he has other evidence, including White House documents, to substantiate his claims, the source said.

The documents presumably are the 43-page volume and eight supporting papers that Dean's lawyer described Friday in U.S. District Court here.

Dean gave the keys to a safe-deposit box to Chief Judge John Sirica, saying the box contains the classified documents taken from the White House to prevent their being destroyed.

The source said the government has refused to grant Dean immunity in exchange for his testimony.

Judge John Sirica today ordered Watergate conspirator Howard Hunt to testify before a special Senate committee on the bugging case, granting him immunity from prosecution.

Senate sources said the Watergate committee also had asked for immunity grants for testimony by Jeb Magruder.

PULITZER PRIZE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Washington Post today won the 57th annual Pulitzer Prize for distinguished public service in journalism for its investigative reporting of the Watergate scandal.

In announcing the gold medal award, the trustees of Columbia University cited two Post reporters, Carl Bernstein, 29, and Robert Woodward, 30, for playing "so dominant a part in the inquiry and... development of much of the evidence that now is public property."

The Times has been carrying stories from these investigating reporters.

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sorensen have appointed themselves a historical society of two — determined to save one of Saanich's most historic landmarks.

It's the Oldfield mansion, built in 1906 when Winnipeg realtor J. H. Oldfield came west and bought himself 550 acres in the lush valley that overlooks the road named for his family.

Oldfield was one of the partners in the company that back in 1908 bought the Uplands site and made the initial plans that led to Oak Bay's posh residential district.

One of the wealthiest men to enter the Uplands gates never lived there.

He was Henry Kaiser, the American shipbuilder, aluminum industrialist and car manufacturer.

When he was in the Uplands Kaiser worked as a laborer, building the original roads.

The man who helped plan so long ago what today is still one of the most preferred residential areas in North America spared no effort when it came to planning his own home.

But when the Sorensens, who came from Nanaimo, first set eyes on it in 1971 it had fallen into sorry shape. The roof was leaking like a sieve, you'd get drowned out if you passed under one area when it was raining, Sorensen recalls.

Birds and wasps were nesting all around the roof.

We knew we were foolhardy to take on such a job—but this house is pure Canadiana. It has a style of its own. It's not pseudo Tudor or anything else, it's part of B.C.'s history. We felt we just had to save the house.

Since 1971, the Sorensens have concentrated on making the house safe and watertight from the outside and hacking away the overgrowth, ivy and weeds that hid the beauty of the 8½-acre remaining in the estate. They've also uncovered two small lakes that two years ago were almost obliterated by felled trees and other debris.

Even inside the house, yet to be tackled by the Sorensens, traces of former elegance are unmistakable.

When Oldfield arrived in Saanich he hired a crew of Chinese to clear his land and two carpenters to build his family home.

"The carpenters were paid two bits a day and it took them two years to finish it," Sorensen reports.

Their workmanship is there to speak of another world today, wooden pegs, not nails, highlighting the panelling.

In the basement of solid stone mighty tree trunks hold up the beams, solid as the day they were placed there.

Also there is a huge solid water tank capable of holding thousands of gallons of rainwater.

There are leaded windows everywhere, some of them bright with colored designs. Huge cavernous fireplaces that once gorged 36 cords of wood a year are ornately tiled.

Now the house is heated by electricity — when the Sorensens can fit it into the family budget.

"A previous owner had the whole system put into electricity," Sorensen explains, "paying $7,000 for a 700-amp circuit, seven times the amount needed for a normal home!"

Their love affair with the house being such a costly one, the Sorensens make their headquarters in only parts of the house when winter hits — making quick "four-minute flat dashes" from room to room when necessary.

Standing in the huge entrance hall, Sorensen said the temperature there reached 28 on more than one occasion.

Now that the outside of the mansion is resuming its long-lost elegance the Sorensens often get callers who spot it from down in the valley. Some of them are interested in buying the old mansion to turn into a restaurant or some other commercial venture.

But the Sorensens stand pat.

Sorensen admits that the huge house is not the most practical of residences for a couple with grown children.

"But," he says, "I don't like to see it exploited and we're hoping we'll be able to find a use for the old home that will preserve it."

He adds, "I've always been a little bit of a nut about history. I guess that's why we tackled this job in the first place."

Just What You Wanted In a Thousand Pieces

It shows my age, I guess, but I remember when you saw something in a store and bought it and had it sent out to your house it arrived at your house just the way it was in the store. Do you remember that, Gramps?

I mean you'd see — say — a storage closet and you'd buy it and presently a large truck would appear with three men in it, a very large, muscular young man and two tiny, ancient men, and the two tiny, ancient men, directed by the shouts of the large, muscular young man, would stagger in with the closet and put it just where you wanted it and that would be the end of it.

This does not happen any more. Almost everything you see in a store these days has been put together to show you how it ought to look, but when it arrives at your house the chances are that it will be neatly boxed and broken down into anything up to a thousand components.

Somewhere inside this crate will be several pages of agate type, headed "Assembly Instructions" or "Installation Procedures," along with little plastic bags containing a tangle of nuts, bolts, screws and other assorted hardware, instantly inducing panic and deep loneliness.

I've a friend who, emboldened by the sudden affluence of a tax refund, recently bought a bicycle and a lawn-mower, both British-made, and a magnificent, canopied lawn swing, made in Japan.

These articles looked perfectly swell in the store, but arrived in the usual neat crates with the usual neat, incomprehensible instructions for putting them together.

Being more than ordinarily inept, my friend soon had the parts for all three items mixed together, had created the world's first lawn swing with handle-bars and was just generally in a state of complete collapse.

I have seen the instructions provided by the Japanese manufacturer of the lawn swing. They are a collector's item, perhaps the finest example extant of impeccable English that makes absolutely no sense whatever. My friend had got no further than the opening words, "Enter tubular cross-bar 'A' through reverse canvass opening" before he threw up his hands and ran, sobbing, to his bedroom.

His conviction, that the Japanese are conspiring to conquer the world by creating mass hysteria, may not be far off.

The only trouble with this theory is the fact that all manufacturers seem equally intent in spreading havoc and, indeed, employ the same team of instruction-writers, united in their complete contempt for we, the new breed of "do-it-yourselfers."

Only last week the instruction writers for Spacemaker Products Ltd., of Mississauga, Ont., and Acemetrak Ltd., of Rexdale, Ont., muscled in on my own well-ordered life and had me keening with frustration.

In the store, itself, the Spacemaker, a six-track metal cupboard, and the louvered door made by Acemetrak were all made up in working order. "Just the thing for that little alcove," my wife said of the shelves. "Just the thing for hiding the shelves," she said of the louvered door. So I wrote out the cheque, thinking how simple life had become.

They arrived together in neat, flat, cardboard boxes pre-packaged in Rexdale and Mississauga.

The "Installation Procedure" for the louvered door began: "Drill all holes seven-sixteenths dia. x one-and-a-half min. deep. Locate pivot holes (holes nearest jambs) one-and-one-quarter inch from edge of door. See Step No. 3 (B). Locate Guide Wheel holes seven-eighths inch from edge of door."

The "Assembly Instructions" for the shelves began: "Turn all shelf pins upside down and press and click shelf clips — Join two post sections together with a splice bar and quarter-inch long bolts and nuts. IMPORTANT — Open centre hole on splice bar MUST be No. 22 from bottom of post assemblies."

An all-consuming lassitude had suddenly come upon me, the inner defensive mechanism that protects me from a world gone mad, and I lay there with the shades drawn in my locked bedroom remembering the days when you saw something in the store and bought it and had it sent out to your house and it arrived at your house just the way it was in the store. You do remember that, don't you, Gramps?

Month-End Start Up For Ferry

Starting date for the Canadian Pacific freight ferry from Swartz Bay to Vancouver has been set for the end of May, the company said today.

Earlier the company had hoped to have the inaugural run of the Carrier Princess on May 15.

The ferry will go from Swartz Bay to downtown Vancouver in three hours and is designed mainly as a truck carrier. However, passenger cars will be accommodated on a reserve basis. Some foot passengers will also be carried.

The Carrier Princess will have a passenger lounge and a light snack-bar. Charge will be $5 for cars, $3 per person.

Sailing times from Swartz Bay are 6 a.m., 1 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. while departure times from Vancouver are 9:30 a.m., 5 p.m. and 1:30 a.m.

The Vancouver landing dock is about halfway between the Bayshore Inn and the CPR train station on Burrard Inlet.

Arsonist Forces Shutdown

Two weekend fires, which have forced Victoria Paving Co. Ltd. to temporarily stop production, are believed to be the work of an arsonist, Victoria Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said today.

Firemen were called to extinguish a piece of canvas burning on top of a 9,000-gallon liquid asphalt tank at the company's Bridge Street plant shortly after 3 a.m. Sunday.

Firemen were called again at 6:21 p.m. to extinguish a fire burning under the same tank.

"It's awfully hard to get asphalt to burn," said Victoria Paving manager E. L. "Tut" Jones. "It's almost impossible."

Jones estimated damage at $6,000, but added insurance investigators are inspecting the plant today.

Spring is the peak season for Victoria Paving and the company was producing a volume of $7,000 to $8,000 a day, said Jones.

Inspector Mike Heppel of Victoria fire department is meeting with the company's management today for further investigation.

Only one out of 12 auto insurance agencies surveyed by the Times has stopped writing automobile insurance as the March — 1974, deadline for compulsory government insurance draws closer.

The survey was prompted by remarks made by A. E. Warrick, chairman of the British Columbia Advisory Council of the Insurance Bureau of Canada, last week.

Thousands of motorists in the province are being forced to look for new companies to carry their insurance, he said, as companies go out of business, stop writing auto insurance or refuse to take high risk drivers.

"How stupid a remark," said John Oster of John Oster Insurance Agencies.

"If he is not writing it he shouldn't be in the business," Oster said, referring to automobile insurance agents.

"I have turned nobody away from my office," he added.

R. Douglas Agencies was the only firm contacted that was not seeing any new auto insurance.

"We have been (selling auto insurance) up until a week ago," and "We're renewing what we have," said Ron Douglas.

GET TOUGHER

Most insurance firms say things are going to get tougher as the deadline for government insurance approaches and there is less profit in writing a policy for only a few months.

"A few insurance underwriting firms have already pulled out of the auto insurance business which makes it tougher for an agent to place a policy."

"The market is definitely going to get tougher as the deadline draws nearer," said Bob Cumberbirch of Cumberbirch Insurance Agencies.

At present many local agents are putting many auto insurance policies through to the Vancouver insurance exchange.

But agents only make a seven per cent commission on policies handled by the exchange as opposed to 12 per cent if they handle the policies through their own firms. Victoria agents complain that the Vancouver Zenith number is continually busy so they often have to wait hours to place one policy.

Considering the small commission and the time involved some agents are not too keen on getting new auto business, according to some agents.

Hefty Increase in Taxes Face Oak Bay Residents

Oak Bay council will bring down its budget tonight and residents face a hefty increase in taxes unless substantial cuts are made.

After two budget-paring sessions the general and debt rate still stands at 46.50, 4.4 mills more than in 1972.

Add to this a school tax upped from 31.14 mills to 32.71, a hospital mill rate of 68 (compared to 1972's 41) and .015 for the municipal financial authority, the mill rate now stands at 79.905, compared to last year's 73.665.

For the owner of a typical house in south Oak Bay, valued on the market in the $33,000 bracket, this means an increase of around $69.

Residents living in the upper Lansdowne area with houses priced in the $45,000 bracket can anticipate increases of about $82.

In the Uplands area, owners of homes with a market value of $66,000 approximately will have a further $125 tacked on their taxes if the budget remains as it stands now.

Tonight's session gets underway at 7:30.

Suburbs Push for Better Bus Service

Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association is the latest Saanich community group to ask for better bus service in the suburbs.

But secretary Mrs. John Clay, who wrote B.C. Transit Bureau pointing out deficiencies in existing public transportation in the Northridge-Royal Oak area, is puzzled and annoyed by the response.

She said she was told by bureau director Victor Parker, "If we're willing to pay more taxes we'll get better bus service, which is kind of a slap in the face because in Saanich we already pay high taxes."

And Parker, she said, found her suggestion for a complementary arrangement between B.C. Hydro transit buses and Pacific Commuter (privately operated) a strange one.

Three other community groups and Saanich council all want improved Hydro bus service in the municipality.

Mrs. Clay said there is no frequent Hydro transit service north of Judah and Glanford, about one mile south of Royal Oak shopping community.

She said Parker pointed out that Royal Oak lies in a private operator's territory where higher fares are permitted.

(Pacific Commuter's existing schedule for Saanich Peninsula service provides for five north-south trips a day through Royal Oak.)

Expanding population, the needs of older people without private transportation and the lack of cheap, convenient transport for students and children justify improved service in the district, Mrs. Clay said.

She supports a request by Gordon Head Ratepayers' Association for east-west bus service in Saanich, which could involve McKenzie or Royal Oak avenues.

The council also favors better routing of Hydro buses for east-west access.

"New schools are going in, more houses are being built in the Glanford area... many, many new houses are in Northridge," Mrs. Clay said.

"Many university students have a difficult time," Mrs. Clay said. For those north of Judah there is no transit and for others in that area connections must be made downtown.

For Northridge residents the existing system requires a quarter-mile walk to regular Carey and Wilkinson buses, and for off-peak times a longer walk — about a mile. Since Hydro is supported by 100 per cent of the people

Course Eyed On Environment

A proposal for an experimental environmental studies program will be considered by University of Victoria senate at its monthly meeting Wednesday.

The program, outlined in the report of a senate ad hoc committee, already has the approval of the faculty of arts and science.

"An environmental studies program offers the University of Victoria an exciting opportunity to become increasingly responsive to the community's needs, and to further advance its academic reputation," says the ad hoc committee.

The committee, set up a year ago by the senate, is chaired by Dr. Derrick Sewell, professor of geography.

The committee proposes a three-pronged program: — A program for increasing environmental awareness, possibly third and four-year credit courses plus a continuing education course for optional credit. This could be initiated at relatively little cost, says the committee.

— A specialist training course in environmental studies.

— An environmental studies institute to do research in the field.

An early start could be made on the program, says the committee's report, because UVic already has faculty experienced in this area.

A number of agencies have already indicated their willingness to furnish financial support provided that the university also made a clear commitment to the program, it says.
